A certain little girl, when asked her name, would reply, "I'm Mr. Sugarbrown's daughter."
Her mother told her this was wrong, she must say, "I'm Jane Sugarbrown."
The Vicar spoke to her in Sunday School, and said, "Aren't you Mr. Sugarbrown's daughter?"
She replied, "I thought I was, but mother says I'm not."

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION

Enforcement Bureau

Spectrum Enforcement Division

1270 Fairfield Road

Gettysburg, Pennsylvania 17325-7245

CERTIFIED MAIL - RETURN RECEIPT REQUESTED

January 29, 2008

Todd E. Daugherty

800 W Main Cross

Taylorville, IL 62568

SUBJECT: Amateur Radio license N9OGL; WARNING NOTICE; Case #EB-07-SE-371

Dear Mr. Daugherty:

Information before the Commission indicates that you have been operating an unlicensed radio station on, among other frequencies, 6.950 and 13.556 MHz. The information indicates that the signal strengths of these transmissions exceed the power limit of Part 15 of the Commission's rules for unlicensed transmitters. Your response to the Enforcement Bureau received on November 6, 2007 was insufficient and contradictory, and indicates a misunderstanding of the Part 15 power limits for unlicensed stations. For example, you stated that your power levels were in compliance with Part 15 of the Commission's rules, yet in statements made in 2006 and 2007 describing your shortwave station "Omega One" you stated that you were operating at 5 watts, then 10 watts and later 50 and 100 watts.

Such unlicensed operation would be a violation of Section 301 of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended, 18 U.S.C. S: 301, and would subject you to a monetary forfeiture (fine) or imprisonment, or both. Forfeitures normally range from $7,500 to $10,000. Furthermore, such operation would reflect adversely on your qualifications to retain an Amateur license.

Sincerely,

W. Riley Hollingsworth

Special Counsel

cc: FCC Northeastern Regional Director

4033. here's kink to hoa progibiting the actual transmissions of cb and ham signals, not just antennas

Since peple didn't believe me, click on this link and take a look at,
I think number 7 and 8.

This is just one of the many hoas that now prohibit the actual transmissions of cb radio and ham radio, besides just prohibiting the cb and ham antennas.

Now again, what good does any federal or state law allowing cb and ham antennas do when the CC&Rs very clearly say that the actual transmitting of cb and ham radio signals are against the rules?

The reason given is it causes interference.

However, since you don't even have to be on hoa property to cause interferece with a cb or ham radio, it would seem that this hoa would also frown upon mobile operation from off the hoa propetrty if the signal can be recieved on hoa property.

Even though I didn't notice any rules at this one prohibiting mobile operation.

However, there have already been other hoas going after mobile operators operating off of hoa property even though the hoa rules didn't mention any bans on mobile operating.

And from what I heard, usually upheld by the courts.

http://74.125.95.132/search?q=cache:U75KrwckTRAJ:www.silveroakshoa.net/show_file.php%3Fid%
3D13293%26type_lib%3D22+%22cb+radio%22%2B%22not+in%22%2B%22hoa%22&hl=en&ct=clnk&cd=7&gl=us

And several people have already said that the FCC has stated several times that the FCC doesn't have any authority over it "since it's a volunatary contract" and is therefoe unable to do anything about it.

So basically, the FCC has admitted and stated that HOA rules regarding radio regulation outweigh and overrule FCC rules regarding radio regulations.

The problem is the FCC Shit for Brains Riley Hollingsworth based that information on information he got off the internet, not based on actually information like a field strength test,which under law they are suppose to do....GOOD LUCK IN THE FUCKING CONTEST LOSER!!

What's really funny is the first letter he sent me, where he claimed the field strength for 13.556 MHz was 30 microvolt per meter at a distance of 30 meters, which in fact it's actually 15,848 microvolts per meter at a distance of 30 meters. It clearly shows that Riley didn't know what the FUCK she was talking about!

Leaving the wedding reception the honeymoon couple hailed a cab to take them to their romantic boutique hotel in the hills. The driver wasn't too sure how to get there and said he would ask directions when they got closer.
Meanwhile, the lovers couldn't wait and got down to it on the back seat. Seeing a fork in the road the driver said, "I take the next turn, right?"

"No way, get your own," said the groom, "this one's all mine."

Not realizing our mother had left some leftover turkey in our oven's broiler, my sister, 19, turned the oven on to bake cookies. Once the oven was hot, she put in the cookies and came back to check on them ten minutes later. When she pulled open the oven door, flames shot out, and my sister shouted, "Mom! Fire!" as she closed the door. Immediately our mother called the fire department and rushed all of us out of the house.
The firefighters were over in a flash, and they quickly hosed the oven down with some foam, then helped us clear the house of smoke. As one of the young firemen was leaving, he turned to my mother and said, "Your daughter is cute. I would ask her out, but I only date women who can cook.

Palmdale, "Kalifornia" is attempting to outlaw amateur radio. The city of Palmdale has now passed a draft zoning law that proposes an enforcement unit that could seize amateur radio equipment and restrict antenna height to one inch above a fixed structure's roof.

It also applies to mobile and portable operation using an HT. They can even arrest you and take your HT just for walking down the street and talking on it.

I am not kidding. Here is a link to the actual proposed ordinance where you can read it for yourself.
http://www.cityofpalmdale.org/city_h...spl120479c.pdf

QRZ.com are leading the hams in a campaign to stop this law from taking effect. You can read all about it here:
http://forums.qrz.com/showthread.php?t=185892

There is also are some videos on YouTube from N9FAA about it.

Federal law trumps state law which trumps local law. You can write any old BS law you want, but that doesn't make it legal. It simply means you have to test it in court. For instance, the feds say you can have a 1 meter dish CONUS. Nobody can stop you.

The problem is the HOA puts liens on property, so you really need gonads to take on these jerks.

Sure they can; all they need to do is pass an ordinance.

Whether or not someone has the resources to file a court challenge and fight it is a separate issue.

technically no they can't, Congress passed a law in 1983 giving the FCC full authority of RF energy also in the 1980's the FCC passed PRB-1 which exempts amateurs to some degree, for example any ordinance that bans all antenna violates PRB-1. Any ordinance created must use the lease restrictive means to serve the government interest.

4107. Want to REALLY annoy your HOA???

Hams, and Cbers, want to really annoy your HOA?

Use a CB HT.

I just found this rule:

"There are no height restrictions for antennas mounted on vehicles or for hand-held units (CB Rule 8)."

So just put a big honking antenna on your cb ht (walkie talkie) that goes way above the roof of your house and way above 20 feet above your line without it being connected to your house at all, just to your ht.

However, I don't suggest doing it with your vehicle even though its legal. There's a lot of low-level bridges and fast food drive throughs, etcetera. And very dangerous power lines.

If you do do it with your ht, make sure there's no power lines or such around that it can accidentally touch.

So you don't get electrocuted.

The HOA would really love that one.

Oh, and IF the ham rules also allow any height antennas on ham hts, use a ham ht with a big honking antenna.

And if your HOA says anything about it, such as "CBs aren't allowed", tell them "it's not a CB. It's a speaker cell phone. Then right in font of them, proceed to call your ham radio buddy or wife or friend by using the autopatch feature of your local ham radio reprater so that the HOA complainer(s) hear the sound of a ringing telephone on it, and the person answering.

With so many people using cell phones these days, would a HOA even dare to make rules regulating cell phones?

Well, maybe.

I actually do have a speaker cell phone.

And also a regular landline speakerphone.

CBers might be able to get away with it using one of the new base cbs that use bluetooth telephone through the CB. Just tell your HOA it's a telephone,
then right in front of them, use your bluetooth feature to make a telephone call over the base cb.

Would the HOA even dare to regulate what kind of telephone people have?

Well, maybe.

I did already read one homeowners statement that he was going to turn another homeowner into the hoa and file a civil lawsuit against him because the other homeowner had a moosehead hanging over the mantle of his fireplace in the living room of his house.

What I want to know is, what business is it of any HOA what kind of interior decorations you have INSIDE ofyour own home?

What business is it of theirs whether you have daisies or tulips sitting in a vase on your ktchen counter INSIDE of your own home?

I didn't even know about the Palmdale California one until reading this message. So chalk up ANOTHER city making such a rule.

"must use the least restrictive means"

then what about all the previous statements in thse newsgroups that legally the local authorities are allowed to be more restrictive than the federal radio rules, but not legally allowed to be less restrictive than the federal rules???????

It seems to be if thety're allowed to be MORE restrictive than the federal rules, then the ban on ham radio in that city by that city is completely
legal, if the law passed.

Not true, many cities believe they can, but if you were to fight it in federal court, they would lose. Cities, States and Federal according to the courts must use the "lease restrictive mean necessary to substances governmental interest". There has been many court cases including Supreme Court cases and which the courts has ruled that is how it's suppose to be. That's where the FCC got that term in PRB-1.

Actually Federal laws also have to abide by the "lease restrictive mean" as well, although a lot of government agencies don't Technically, yes they can.

A city can pass an ordinance making it illegal to wear a white shirt and it is law until challenged in court.

And, for what it is worth, California adoptd AB 1228 in 2003 which basically makes PRB-1 part of state law.

Neither AB 1228 nor PRB-1 mean anything until a locality passes and enforces an ordinace contrary to state and federal statute AND an individual is "harmed" by the ordinance AND the individual challenges the ordinance in court.

I also got the 404 error. His other link to qrz worked and I got this working link of Palmdale's website mentioning ham antennas dated December 2008.

Now you do know, don't you, that NOT living in a HOA does NOT stop HOAS from going after you for violating their HOA rules and that living in a place without HOAs withoutCC&Rs without anything stating that HOAs can take over later does NOT stop HOAS or CC&Rs from taking over your non-HOA non CC&R home and property. The latter has actually happened to me. So DON'T tell me it's as simple as just not moving into a place
without a HOA or CC&Rs. It's NOT. I now KNOW better. I found out the hard way. Which cost me a lot of money that I couldn't realy afford.

The following examples are not from my cases, however

HOAS have went after cell phone companiesfor building cell phone towers that were NOT on any HOA property at all.

HOAS have went after some hams for having ham radio towers on their own property where both the house and land were NOT in nor part of any HOA atall, and had no CC&R restrictions on the house or land at all.

The HOAS still put liens on those hams' houses for refusing to join the hoa and follow hoa rules and hoa CC&Rs, even though there were NOT any laws permitting them to do so.

My exeriences with a HOA/CC&Rs is a long one to tell, but to make it very brief in this message, which doen't even begin to explain the half of it, I had moved into the cheapest trailer park in that county. Everything was decent and the place was taken good care of until a new landlord took over and started imposing a bunch of HOA rules and CC&Rs on the residents of the trailer park where there had been none before.

The old landlord/trailer park owner was very upset about not owning the trailer park anymore which makes me think it was taken over by eminent domain
instead of being willfully sold.

The new landlord raised the rent the trailers at least every two months, sometimes every month. The rent went up at least fifteen times in less than one year.

What used to be the least expensive trailer pak to live in in that county was now the most expensive trailer park to live in in that county.

And it was now a dump because of the new landlord where it had been a nice decent looking place before the new landlord/trailer park owner .

Other people could no longer afford to live in their trailers. So the new landlord had their trailers bulldozed.

He also hired bulldozers to "improve" the place which made it a dump and ruined my car that I had at the time.

Even going one mile per hour, the and now scrapedheavily against the bottom of my car, and that was the only way to get my car to my trailer's driveway since cars were no longer allowed to be parked out of your own driveway.

When it was the cheapest trailer park under the ownership of the old landlord, the snow in the winter was always cleared. The place is in the middle of the "Snow Belt" here.

While it was the most expensive trailer park under ownership of the new landlord, the snow was NEVER plowed, and city snow trucks would NOT plow there "since it's private property owned by the trailer park's landlord. The city isn't allowed to plow there. It's against the law for the city to plow there without the permission of the trailer park owner".

Shovel it by hand you say? Nope. That was against the new CC&Rs. Because the only place you could put the snow you shoveled was to pile it upon your yard, which was NOT allowed by the new CC&Rs.

And besides, you CAN'T shovel ice which sometimes happened there in the winter.

And putting salt on the ice to melt it was against the new CC&Rs.

Some other trailer park residents fought it (the whole thing) in court and LOST the court cases!!!!!!

Since the place was no longer plowed, my car got stuck in the ice when trying to leave for work one day. The tire was just barely touching the trailer park driveway off of my driveway. Less than an eighth of an inch.

The new landlord had by car towed and impounded for being off of my driveway and being illegally parked on the trailer park driveway in violation of the CC&R rules of the trailer park.

Just because just ONLY ONE tire of my car was less than an eighth of an inch off of my driveway. While the whole rest of the car incliding the other tires were all completely in my driveay.

And AFTER losing money from not making it to work that day, I had to PAY a bunch of money to get my car out of impound. Money that I didn't really have. I had to borrow it from somewhere else/someome else.

And that's not even the half of it. It's not even half of the beginning of it.

Months later, it turmed out that the new trailer park landlord was a developer who was building very expensive townhouses right next door to the trailer park.

No wonder he was making it hard on all of the people living in the trailer park and forcing as many people out as he could and bulldozing as many trailers as he could.

After all, who living in expensive townhouses would want to live next door to "trailer trash"???

The interesying thing here is that the trailer park was NOT a dump until AFTER the new landlord/owner/land developer took it over.

BEFORE that, it was a very nice looking place.

SO DON'T TELL ME IT'S JUST AS EASY AS MOVING INTO A PLACE WITHOUT A HOA OR ANY CC&rS. I NOW KNOW BETTER. I HAVE ALREADY HAD EXPERIENCES WTH THAT.

As a followup to my previous post, we lost our trailer that was bought with our money since we could no longer afford to live there. And our trailer was also bulldozed.

As I said, that's not even half the beginning of it.
I can afford are
Which is why I never wwant to live in any place with a HOA, or CC&Rs again, no even NA's.

However, I can currently only afford apartments, most of which have some sort of CC&Rs.

This might sound like a joke, but it isn't.

You know those back up safety lights they sell to install in and on your car that uses the frequencies in the ham bands?

However, Burger King has signs up saying "no videorecording or photography allowed" and that "violators will be prosecuted".

So with that sign, Burger King is telling all of us that it is against the law to have safety lights on your car because it violates Buger King's rules.

They seem as bad or maybe even worse than Palmdale, California.

But you all just KNOW that sometime somewhere some city will pass a law requiring you to have those safety backup lights on your car.

Whch also poses a problem in federal areas where they say "no cameras allowed" and no photography" allowed since it's NOT easy and is actually a pain to keep uninstalling them and reinstalling them.

Such as if your city passes a law requiring them and you have to drive to your local social security office for some reaon, where they're prohibited by law.

Maybeit's an old retired ham or old retired cber.

To follow th law you must break the law. That is

To follow the law of no cameras permitted anywhere on social security/federal property, you must remove them BEFORE you get your car on that property, but by doing so, you are breaking your city's law by not having them on your car while on city property off of federal property.

But following the law to have them on your car on city property means you must have them on your car until your car is completely off of city property which means until AFTER par of your car is on federal property and you're now in violation of federal law prohibiting cameras on federal property.

And who is Burger King to tell me that I'm not allowed to have safety lights on my car???????

yeah, some smart aleck is probably wanting to answer, "Well, he is the king."

Not in the U.S., he isn't.

Seriously, in my opinion, the Burger King company,corporation, whatever they are, has NO business telling me that I MUST drive more dangerously.

And that I MUST risk running over kids that are too small to see behind my car with the mirrors while backing up.

Or their pets.

Who is Burger /king to tell me that I HAVE to run over innocent little kids because having transmitting safety backup lights on my car violates Burger King's rules against "no cameras, no photograhy, and no videorecording?????

Guess what? With those safety backup lights transmitting on the ham bands, even if I don't do any videorecording, you just KNOW that there's probably going to be some ham somewhere in his own house watching it and videorecording it from his own house.

Maybe even several hams at their own homes videorecording the transmissions from the safety backup lights.

So take that, Burger King.

Of course, with their sign, they have already threatened to call the police and prosecute anyone they catch with any kind of camera on their property.

Once, even while inside Burger King, the manager came up to me and told me to get rid of my "camera" that I had because it's against the law and not allowed inside there.

Until I then showed him that my so-called "camera" was NOT a "camera" at all, but an Icom IC-R3 tv set.

Yes, the idiot BK manager thought my Icom IC-R3 radio/tv reciever was a "camera".

Besides having signs up saying videotaping and photography are

So Burger King has a double standard.

So here's some other things to Burger King.

Those car safety back up lights don't just transmit on one channel, but do simultaneously transmit on all four part 15 channels, two of which are ham channels.

And not only can hams pick up all four channels, but other people who are not hams can also pick up all four channls if they want to and buy
right equipment to do so.

And maybe I shouldn't tell them this, but your own security cameras
Burger King uses can probably also be picked up by hams in their own homes
and by other people in their own homes who are not hams.

hahahahahahahahahahaha.

So take that, Burger King.

Now you do know, don't you, that NOT living in a HOA does NOT stop HOAS from going after you for violating their HOA rules and that living in a place without HOAs withoutCC&Rs without anything stating that HOAs can take over later does NOT stop HOAS or CC&Rs from taking over your
non-HOA non CC&R home and property. The latter has actually happened to me. So DON'T tell me it's as simple as just not moving into a place
without a HOA or CC&Rs. It's NOT. I now KNOW better. I found out the hard way. Which cost me a lot of money that I couldn't realy afford.

They would do so over their dead bodies to any property of mine (were I to own any). Talk about your socialism, CC&R's are the very essence thereof.
Whatever happened to private property in this country? I don't recall that any law was changed to say that my neighbors own any part of my home (nor I of my neighbors.) When the neighbors are paying your mortgage, then, and ONLY then, should they have a say in what you do on your own property.
PERIOD.

You are the joke "radioguy" .
The Burger King sign says "no videorecording or photography allowed".

It doesn't say yo cn't have a camera or camcorder. It says you cannot take photographs or video recording. What's your problem?
Either don't go to Burger King r if you go follow their rules.

I was at the local electronics place for something to use for a random-wire and mentioned that I couldn't put up any kind of permanent SW receiver antenna. The guy there said one customer was in the same situation, living in an apartment. His solution was to do only mobile equipment, and he had dumped quite a bit of money into gear in his car.

The only way I could see doing this, was if you bought a smaller camper, and put all your gear into that, with some kind of pop-up mast. Then you could drive out to a rural area and have a comfortable, RF-noise-free* radio shack to have your fun.

Oh please. If you are outside the "store" you can record anything you like.
People do not have the expectation of privacy in public. This would include the drive-thru line at Burger King.

Burger King might be able to give you a trepass order and make it so you can't come back but I'd like to know what law they think you are breaking by recording your experience in their drive thru. I'll bet that law doesn't exist or doesn't apply.

What does this have to do with scanners?

And to add insult to injury, you'll have to spend your money to get your antenna installed, spend your money to fight the city's illegal rules, and then you'll have to pay your taxes.. which the city will use to FIGHT YOU and your antenna installation.

The Government(at all levels) passes all kind of laws that probably aren't legal or constitutional. They're supposed to at least try to pay attention to existing rules, laws, and the Constitution but frequently they don't. And then we the people have to spend our time and resources fighting the people we elect to these offices.

The real problem is no one pays attention to these things. Even if you manage to go to court, get these rules thrown out, the people who wrote them will not be penalized in any palpable way.

I had a HAM friend in a town near Sacramento who had to fight city hall on an antenna tower he'd set up. He had it up for almost 10 years before the city noticed.. and then tried to pull some permit nonsense to get him to take it down. Luckily he found a city clerk with half a brian, explained to them that the FCC handles these matters, and they left him alone.

Having safety lights that transmit pictures is photography, as far as Burger King is concerned.

I already had a BK manager tell me to get rid of my "camera" that I was NOT taking any pictures with inside since "cameras aren't allowed and are illegal inside here".

The reason I didn't take any pictures wth that "camera" was because it was NOT a "camera", but WAS a radio and tv set.

Lots of people take their radios into Burger King and listen to them with headphones out.

The idiot manager thought that my radio was a camera. And he wasn't a young kid either. he was a middle aged man.

I don't go there much anymore anyways, but it does have serious legal implications.

Suppose I'm on the public street and happen to get in a car accident that's not my fault, but is completely the othe guy's fault and his car makes mine end up in Burger King's parking lot.

I can now be charged with illegallyy violating Burger Kings rules "no photograpgy allowed".

Even though I never intended to be at Burger King.

Since "evidence obtained illegally" is not permitted to be used as evidence in court, I would then now be unable to use the pictures from the safety lights that would prove the accident was not my fault while I'm n court.

While I would be able to legally use thiose same safety light pictures as evidence in court as long as my car happened to spin and land somewhere off of Burger King property.

But if my car spins and happens to land on Burger King property, that same legal evidence is now illegal evidence.

Also, some Burger Kings also have the "no videorecording or photography allowed" signs posted on their drive through windows where you pick up your food.

If that rule was just meant for the inside of the building, why is it posted where the drive through customers see it?

And if it's meant to address just the employees, why is it positioned so that the drive throughcustomers see it?

It seems the only reason to have it there is if the rule was meant for the whole premises, both inside and outside the building.

Also futher legal implications:

I don't know why BK has that rule, but if it's because you don't want your employees photographed, get this:

A car with safety lights installed does NOT even have to be on BK at all to photograph your employees.

A car with safety lights installed can be completely on the city-owned public streets and as long as your employees are in sight of whatever the safety lights see, the safety lights WILL transmit live motion pictures of your employees.

And other people can then videorecord your employess from their own home by recording those safety ligt transmissions.

Once a viideorecording is made, it's a simple matter to make stills from that video or even simpler, instead of bothering to make stills, just put up the video as you recorded in, in full glorious full motion video.

Since no one wa on BK property, and the videos of BK employees was not inteninall made by the person with the safety lights, and thepeople at home recording were just recording tv signl they just happen to recieve, and they were not recording any transmissions from BK cameras but were recording transmissions from the safety light cameras, and BK has no authority over the person with the safety light cameras since they were never on BK property.

What can and can't be installe on cars is the business of whoever in the state controls vehicle laws, NOT the business of Burger King.

And I very much doubt that any city,county, or state would even consider, let alone passing a law that makes it against the law to have SAFETY LIGHTS that protects kids more installe on your vehicle.

And if some city, county, or state government was stupid enough to actually pass a law making it against the law to have SAFETY LIGHTS that protect kids moe installed on your vehicle, I think that city, county, or state would find theirselves in a unch of political hot water, a bunch of legal hot water, and involved in a bunch of court cases.

As far as I can see, I have not found aanything in my local city, county, or state laws yet that state having SAFETY LIGHTS installed on your car is against the law.

If they were, then why are the legal national chain stores allowed to kegally sell them?

Along with other stores that are not national chain stores.

I'm not sure if the safety lights also transmit sound besides just pictures or not, so maybe people watching the safety light transmissions at home might even be able to hear what your employees are saying in addition to seeing them, while scanner listerners would be able to hear them in such a case.

And all the while with both the car and safety lights never ever ever bein on Burger King property at all.

So take that, Burger King.

IThat is not as easy as you make it sound. I would like to see you keep on uninstalling and reinstalling safety lights on your car
everytime you
enter and leave Burger King property.

It's at least a two hour job one way.

Who in their right mind is going to spend two or mor hours
uninstalling safety lights right before entering BK property and then another two hours
or more reinstalling them after leaving BK property just to have lunch
there for half an hour or less???

Not only that, but you will most likely get arrested if you do so,
since you will be blocking traffic on the public streets for hours at a time while uninstalling them right outside of Burger King prroperty.

And of you reinstall them while on BK property before leaving so you won't block traffic, the BK managers and employees will woner what you're doing there fo so long and will say something to you anout it.

So again, what right does Burger Kimg have to say SAFETY LIGHTS
intalled on your car are illegal since it violates Burger King's own rules about
"no photography".

When there's nothing in actual local city, county or state laws saying that SAFETY LIGHTS made specifically to be installed on a car are against the
law to intall in you car???

They're sold specifically to be installed on your car in order to protect kids more and pets and other peoples' property.

You may be right. That might be a loophole. It's obvious that Burger King's intentions, for whatever reason, is so that there won't be any photographs or videorecordings of their employees.

The SAFETY LIGHTS don't actually take "photographs" and don't do any "videorecoring" but they DO transmit live motion pictures in realtime which CAN be videorecorded by other people in their own homes.

Which either photographic stills can be made from or can be left as a videorecording.

And a car with safety lights instaled doesn't even have to be on BK property for such a transmission/videorecording of BK employees to be made.

If the employees are outdside, it will most likely see them. If they're inside, well a lot of BK is window glass.

However as I said, whle inside a BK restaurant, a BK manager already thought that my radio, complete with headphones, was a "camera" and told me it wasn't allowed in there since "cameras aren't allowed in here".

It is very obvious to me that I was not taking any pictures with a RADIO that was capable of recieving only, radio and tv signals.

And it's not just BK. Some other restaurants and some other places are doing the same thing with a "no cameras allowed" rule or a "n phoyography allowed" rule.

'ems some OLD hams. Citizens Radio Service (11m) has existed since the mid-late 1950's. Of course, it didn't start to take off until the mid '70's.
Within two years of that, it was already insane. It's a bit better now, since most folks have sold or tossed their radios long since.

IThat is not as easy as you make it sound. I would like to see you keep on uninstalling and reinstalling safety lights on your car
everytime you
enter and leave Burger King property.

It's at least a two hour job one way.

uninstalling safety lights right before entering BK property and then another two hours
or more reinstalling them after leaving BK property just to have lunch
there for half an hour or less???

since you will be blocking traffic on the public streets for hours at a time while uninstalling them right outside of Burger King prroperty.

And of you reinstall them while on BK property before leaving so you won't block traffic, the BK managers and employees will woner what you're doing there fo so long and will say something to you anout it.

So again, what right does Burger Kimg have to say SAFETY LIGHTS
intalled on your car are illegal since it violates Burger King's own rules about
"no photography".

When there's nothing in actual local city, county or state laws saying that SAFETY LIGHTS made specifically to be installed on a car are against the

They're sold specifically to be installed on your car in order to protect kids more and pets and other peoples' property.

You and Jerry should hook up.

That was done by BK as a result of teenagers videotaping pranks at the drive-thru and elsewhere in the resturant and later posting the same on Youtube. Not so much for copyright infringement but more to prevent clownish young adults from pranking with cellphone cameras and the like. expect the rest of the fast food eateries to follow suit. They could care less about any arcane "technical aspects" concerning the (same) rule. Just don't let 'em know what it is and they'll just think you're a fireman or an EMT and your ham radio HT is a "portable".

So what's to prevent me from pranking them? Just today I saw some other backup lighs for sale, but this one with a honking big huge monitor.

Maybe I'll get it just to p.o. Burger King.

And drive through there where they won't be able to help but notice the picture showing them theirselves.

So hams, get out your ham video monitors, and cbers and everyone else, get out your part 15 video monitors. It's probably going to be a real show.

Of course after that, they probably won't let me back on their property. But who cares? That would be worth it. I agree with the poster who said
Wendy's makes better hamburgers.

They

I was originally going to agree with you. but then I thought no they probably won't think that. After all, the idiots already thought that my Icom IC-R3
RADIO WAS A CAMERA that I WAS taking pictures with!!!!

They "seen" me "taking pictures" with it.

I still wonder how since that radio does NOT take pictures.

And since I was NOT taking pictures with it.

Not even acting like I was. Just sitting there listening to it.

Yet plenty of other people use radios in there without any problems that I know of.

Who knows what boneheaded ideas they would think or come up with about safety lights?

they might think I'm a fireman or emt like you said. However, after them seeing me take pictures with a RADIO that does NOT take pictures, I very much doubt that they are that smart.

Firemen and emt probably won't even cross their mind.

It will probably more than likely be some boneheaded idea that sane people never thought of.

And if the honking big huge monitor showing them theirselves doesn't get them P.O.ed, it will probably at least freak them out.

Especially if they can't find the transmitting camera anywhere.

After all, they must not be vey smart since they thought a RADIO WAS A CAMERA.

And if any hams or cbers or anyone else records it,

Then we'll all have another "Whopper Freakout" video to post on you tube.

A better prank just thought of.

Go next door off of BK prroperty, and videorecord them from inside the building next door or from outside the building next door.

After all, you won't be on BK property while doing it so you can videorecord if it's your house or the house of a friend of yours.

Then drive through there with a car without saafety lights installed, but a video of what you recorded of them earlier.

They'll probably really freak out. You won't get a video of them freaking out this way, but they also WON'T find a camera ANYWHERE in this case.

No matter how hard they try.

Ooopsss! Never mind.

this idea won't work. The problem with this idea is that they will think and say that your am/fm car radio IS a camera. And they seen you taking pictures with it.

Or that your ham radio IS a camera. And they seen you take pictures with it.

Or that your CB radio IS a camera. And they seen you taking pictures with it.

If it's a radio, then it IS a camera as far as BK is concerned.

Just like they already told me that my radio IS a camera.

that they seen me "taking pictures with"

Ha!!!

No, my messages were not spam. If you don't like my new crimefighting attitude, you can blame Steam and Valve.

Ever since I got ripped off by Steam and Valve, I am on a crusade to verbally fight all crime and ccorruption that I see or experience by verbally exposing their crime, corrruption, and illegal activities by posting on the internet.

I'm not taking t anymore. Too many people don't stand up for the real laws of this country anymore, which is most likely why things just keep getting worse and worse.

Next up on the list:

The illegal activites of Palmdale, California.

IF they are indeed illegal activities.

Which several people said they are.

But are they really?

I'll have to take another look at their rules and regulations.

However, whether legal or illegal, they sure are making it hard to impossible for hams to put up antennas of any sort

Imagine if you didn't stand up for the real laws of the country and just sat back saying nothing and posting nothing and letting Palmdale illegally do whatever they want to.

you soon wouldn't be able to use your ham radio at all. Then no using your cb at all. Then no using your frs at all. But it wouldn't stop there.

Next or eventually comes regulating the color of the cell phone you can have. The color of the cordless phone you can have if they don't outlaw those first.
The color of your house. Etcetera.

And impossible to follow laws since they purposely contradict theirselves.

The posts about Palmdale on qrz were back from 2006 and I think 2002 or so also. the current one is current, December 2008, and even the 2002.2006 one wasn't the first time Palmdale tried banning ham antennas.

They also tried it around 1992 or 1994. I saw the posts dated around then.

It seems obvious that Palmdale is NOT going to give up trying to ban ham radio antennas or ham radio alltogether.

And did they or didn't they just ban mobile ham radios and handgelds also.

From reading their rules, I believe their intentions were to ban handhelds, but if so, they goofed as it seems to me their rules permit handhelds and handheld antennas.

However, if permitted like it seems to be, their intentions might have been to allow them instead of ban them.

But that doesn't seem to mesh with the rest of the rules.

It looks to me like they are trying to ban mobile ham radio operation.

What about those of us from out of town and out of state who just happen to be driving through Palmdale on vacation or for some other reason and have big honking huge ham antennas on our car since they're not illegal where we live?

I think It said something about them having to meet the vehicle code about ham antennas.

However, I have never ever seen any vehicle code mentioning ham antennas.

Of course, being California, theirs' might.

If their vehicle code doesn't mention ham antennas, what are the chances of Palmdale using that to say since the vehicle code doesn't mention ham antennas at all, then the ham antennas don't meet the requirements of being how the vehicle code says they must be, and are therefore illegal.

You have to remember, California is screwy. And Palmdale even more so, from what I've read posted by other people.

They said Palmdale is and was already a bad trashy looking ghetto dump.

And that a bunch of ham radio towers would actually improve the look of the place.

I've never been there myself, so I can't say for sure if that's true or not.

At least not without a big huge fight on their hands.

The latter is what happened to me and everyone else in the trailer park once the new landlord/owner of the trailer park took over.

okay, here's one the pro-coders either never thought of or did think of and just didn't want to mention it or post it at all.

Which I know is true in at least some people's cases.

How many of the no-code ham radio technicians used to practice cw/morse code on the old 49 mhz radios when they were kids?

Or on the older 27 mhz radios when they were kids?

Just because they are a no-code ham radio technician today doesn't necessarilly mean that they never ever used morse code in their entire lives.

okay. If I was a ham living in Palmdale, California right now, I would do this kooky thing.

The proposed law says antennas are not allowed to be one inch over the roof line at all.

And unless I'm mistaken, I think it says antennas on portable ht's are exempt from the antenna laws.

So I wonder how Palmdale would like itt if I sat on top of my roof with a portable ham HT in my hand, talking on it, in which case the antenna on it would be MORE than one inch above the roof line of the house.

Hey, they did say portable ham HT's are exempt from the law, unless I misread something.

When you're not allowed any antenna towers over one inch above the roof line, what better way to get better reception than to talk on your HT while sitting on top of your roof?

hmmm... another idea. I guess there is a better way. Nope. I thought of using an extension cord to set your base/mobile rig on top of the roof using a mag mount antenna on a pizza pan, while talking on it, but base/mobile rigs aren't exempt from Palmdale's laws and would count as an illegal antenna over one inch above the roof line.

Back to the talking on a portable HT while you're sitting on top of the roof of your house.

I wonder how Palmdale would like those aesthetics.

Of course they'll probably still try to get you for having an antenna over one inch above the roof line.

But you can then show them their ordinance that says HT's are exempt.

However, a ham winning against them in court when they revoked his permit for an antenna two years after they gave him one.. is what prompted them to try to pass this latest proposed ordinance to eliminate all ham radio they can.

At least that's what several people have said.

Has he been following you around? If not, how can that be stalking?

Has he been initiating contact with you for the purpose of intimidating you? If not, how can that be harassment?

Note: If you go seek him out - say by going to nimbusters.org - then he's not harassing you, since he didn't initiate the contact. In fact, if YOU initiated the contact, then YOU are stalking HIM.

You have been providing the illegal materials to their residents via the Internet, so they don't really need any additional evidence. The U.S. has already arrested Russian citizens who visited here for violating our laws from Russian web sites, so the precident has been set.

You'd better not visit either Australia or Canada for the rest of your life.

Agreed. However, Palmdale is shooting itself in the "foot."

For those not aware, Palmdale is adjacent to the San Andreas Fault. I can easily envision any and all amateur operators in the area REFUSING to take part in any emergency communication, whether practice or real, with regard to any disaster in the area. Palmdale obviously does not value the operators as a resource.

Note that Palmdale also went after TV and satellite antennas. Again, there are laws separate from PRB-1 and its state equivalent that exist at both the federal and state levels of government that clearly PERMIT these antennas. Practically EVERYTHING cited in the proposed statute is pre-empted at a higher government level. Is the City really that clueless?

I guess I stand corrected then. They are trying to outlaw ham HTs also, since they say they can confiscate them.

However, notice that they also exempted their own selves from the very rules that they are trying to impose on ham radio operators.

Also, they claim it's to eliminate interference to other electronics by ham radio.

However, as ham radio operators and some cbers know, lowering the height of the antennas INCREASES interference.

Why didn't someone tell Palmdale that? Or did they?

If they were told that, and really wanted to decrease unterference to electonics by ham radio, they would INCREASE the height linit.

Which they aren't.

If they were told that, and still DECREASING the height limt like they're trying to do, then it's obvious it's not about them wanting to decrease interference but is about them wanting to eliminate ham radio alltogether.

Palmdale: The ordinance must also provide a reasonable accommodation of licensed amateur radio operators and allow the rights of the public to have access to programming received through residential television receive-only antennas.

Me: So Palmdale admits that they must provide reasonable accomadation to licensed radio amateurs.

Palmdale: Further, the regulations were to ensure that residential television and amateur radio antennas are designed, installed and located in a way that avoids hazards to public health and safety;

Me: So they lowered the antenna height limits which INCREASES both interference and rf safety hazards to the public instead of decreasing them like they falsely claim to be doing.

Palmdale: minimizes adverse aesthetic effects; and is compatible with
the surrounding neighborhood by preventing adverse visual, health, safety, and other impacts on the surrounding properties and/or the community while at the same time reasonably accommodating amateur radio service communications.

Me: Then why did they INCREASE the health and safety hazards with this proposed ordinance if they want to decrease them?

And translation of Palmdale's meaning of "minimizes adversse aesthitic effects": "We don't want to see anyham antennas any where at all because we don't like the look of them."

Palmdale: ANALYSIS

The new ordinance permits the following types of antennas to be installed without prior approval of the Planning Department of the City of Palmdale. However, they may still be required to obtain a building permit from the Building and Safety Department. These antennas include: a) antennas that are installed, placed or maintained and used under the roof, or extend no more than one inch above the roof, or are behind and below an approved architectural feature and do not protrude above the highest point of the building and are not visible from a public right-of-way or other private property, including upper floors of adjacent buildings; b) antennas that are handheld or mounted on vehicles consistent with the vehicle code; and c) antenna installations intended for use by the City of Palmdale or another governmental agency.

Me: "Under the roof where they can't seen by anyone outside, no more than one inch above the roof so people outside won't see them, or behind and below an approved arcgitectural feature so that they can't be seen by anyone outside, only the architecural feaaturee which must also be approvedm and even these antennas might "still require" a "permit from the building department"

Did they just outlaw both mobile and ht operation with the above rules if the proposal passes as law?

It sure seems like it.

Translation of Palmdale's statements: We don't want to see any ham radio antennas anywhere because we don't like the loks of them and we don't like ham radio at all."

Palmdale: It also allows a single vertical antenna mounted directly on the ground or on a roof that is located in a non-residential zone or in a residential zone where the lot on which the antenna is located and all lots within a 1,000 foot radius are at least one acre in size.
The antenna is to extend no more than six feet above the main structure and must be located behind and attached to the main structure on the lot if ground-mounted, and on the back quarter of the roof if roof-mounted. The antenna is to be colored to minimize its reflectivity and blend with its surroundings as much as possible.
Antennas Approved by Minor Modification or Conditional Use Permit (CUP)
The ordinance then specifies the types of antennas to be permitted by either the Minor Modification or Conditional Use Permit process. The antennas permitted under the Minor Modification approval process are essentially the same as those antennas noted above with the exception that the lot size requirement of one-acre has been deleted thereby requiring a Minor Modification approval on all lots less than one acre in area. It also provides that the height shall extend no more than six feet above the main structure in a residential district no more than fifteen feet above the main structure in a non-residential district.

The Minor Modification process also requires that notification be provided to adjacent property owners and any homeowner’s association at the cost of the applicant.

MeL: So Palmdale is sating that if you want to put up an antenna, you must notify ALL of the aadjacent property owners. Of course their definition of adjacent is probably "everyone who can see it" instead of just "next door neghbors".

And at your own expense.

You know they'll want you to prove in writing that you notified them if some case or court case comes up.

Palmdale: notice will state that any appeal to the Minor Modification must be filed with the City within thirty days of the date the notice was mailed. An applicant or any interested person may file an appeal to the Planning Commission, of the Planning Director’s decision to issue or deny a Minor Modification, which appeal will automatically stay the director’s decision and/or rescind any Minor Modification issued and cause the application to be processed as an application for a Conditional Use Permit. An appeal must be filed within 30 days after the date of the notice. The Minor Modification will then become effective thirty days from the date the notice was mailed if no appeal is received within that time. If an appeal is received within such time, the Minor Modification is to be rescinded and the applicant required to file an application for a Conditional Use Permit to obtain permission to install or construct the antenna. If the installation of any antenna is not prohibited pursuant to Section D, or permitted pursuant to Section E or Subsection F.1, the antenna shall require a Conditional Use Permit approved by the Planning Commission in order to be established.
Amateur Radio Antenna

The Minor Modification or Conditional Use Permit applications for amateur radio antennas require the submittal of additional information related to the ham radio
Memo to the Planning Commission
Zoning Ordinance Amendment (ZOA) 08-04
December 4, 2008

operation. The additional information will include information about the radio operator, specific information on the proposed antenna and site location, any structural details, any mitigation measures proposed to minimize any adverse effects such as painting or screening of the antenna or antenna structure, and a statement of the reasons why an antenna as permitted under Subsection E will unreasonably interfere with the operator's ability to receive or transmit signals.

Other information will include a list of equipment, proposed maximum transmission power wattage to be used, and a discussion of other available methods to accomplish amateur radio communication without exceeding the development standards which do not require Planning approval.

Me: When did Palmdale get the authority to regulate how much maximun transmission power wattage you can use???????????????

I thoght only the FCC has the authority to regulate that.

So now Palmdale is falsely claiming they have more authority over radio transmissions than the FCC does.

Palmdale: The City may alsor retain the services of a consultant to assist in the evaluation of an antenna proposal with the cost of such services to be paid for by the applicant.

Me: So Palmdale says you yoursel (hams)f HAVE TO PAY for the sercices of a consultant that the city itself hires and retains to assist in the evaluation of an antenna proposal

Palmdale: In addition to the standard findings required for approval of a Minor Modification or a Conditional Use Permit, the ordinance as proposed requires that additional findings be made prior to approving a Minor Modification or Conditional Use Permit for an antenna
or antenna support structure:
a) That the applicant has demonstrated that strict compliance with the development

standards specified in Subsection E would unreasonably interfere with the applicant's ability to receive or transmit signals, or that strict compliance with said development standards is not, under the circumstances of the particular case,
necessary to achieve the goals and objectives of this Section.
b) That the antennas, including antenna support structures and accessory equipment shall be located, sized and designed so as to minimize the amount of the antenna that is visible from surrounding properties, public streets and all public rights-of-way, recognizing that complete screening may not be possible

Me: translation of Palmdale's statements; We don't want any ham radio antennas visible at all.

the above is another of Palmdale's proposed laws that outlaw both mobile ham radio use and portable ht use.
Palmdale: c) That in the case of amateur (ham) radio antennas, the use permit would accommodate reasonably the amateur's desire for communication, while at the same time requiring the minimum practicable regulation to accomplish the City's legitimate purpose of protecting the public health, safety, welfare, aesthetics and compatibility with the neighborhood.
d) There is adequate space on the property for the antenna and antenna support structure without conflicting with buildings on the property or usable yard areas
required by other sections of the Zoning Ordinance.
Zoning Ordinance Amendment (ZOA) 08-04
e) The antenna would not despoil the primary view of a neighbor me: translation of Palmdale's statement: No outside ham antennas at all since a neighbor can see them.

They just once again made another rule/law, if it passes, that outlaws both mobile and ht operation. Your antenna must NOT be in the prinary view of any neighbor.

Which a mobile will be at some point while driving through the neighborhood, or entering or leaving your home. The same for a HT.

Palmdale: f) There are trees or a nearby landform that would serve as a backdrop to mask the silhouette of the antenna.
g) There are trees or other features in the neighborhood that represent existing tall features as part of the neighborhood character.

me: translation of Palmdale's statements: We don't want to see any ham antennas at al.

Palmdale: In granting the permit, the Planning Commission or Planning Director as the approving authority may impose conditions reasonably necessary to accomplish the purposes of this Section, provided those conditions do not unreasonably interfere with the ability of the applicant to receive or transmit signals.
Minimum Requirements
The proposed amendment also provides the following minimum requirements; however, the approving authority may impose greater restrictions as necessary to protect the public health, safety, welfare, aesthetics and compatibility with the neighborhood.
These criteria specify a variety of minimum requirements related to height, screening, operation, insurance, modification to existing antennas, annual inspections, and nonconforming antennas.
1. Height. The antenna shall not exceed the minimum height determined by the approving authority to be reasonably necessary to achieve transmission and reception.

me: Which doing so INCREASES the public's exposure to rf hazards instead of decreasing them.

And what does Palmdale consider "reasonably necessary to achieve transmission and reception"? recieving other hams from one mile away? What if you wanted to or needed to talk to people further away?

Palmdale: The applicant shall provide information and fund any expert evaluation of the specific site being requested as required by the approval authority to documentthe minimum height required to the satisfaction of the approving authority.
2. Screening. Ham radio antennas shall be screened to the extent practicable with vegetation, trellises or other means acceptable to the approving authority even though the screening may somewhat diminish the effectiveness but provided that it does not significantly impair the operation of the antenna.

Me: Yeah, that will sure help the signal from my 70 centimeter ham transmitter to get out. /sarcasm

Palmdale: 3. Insurance. The antenna owner shall provide proof of liability insurance in the event that the antenna falls and damages persons or property. Such insurance
shall be maintained as long as the antenna is in place.
Memo to the Planning Commission
Zoning Ordinance Amendment (ZOA) 08-04

me: So in Palmdale, if you have a ham antenna, you MUST pay for ham radio antenna liability insurance as long as you have the antenna up.

Which of course will probably be at least a monthly fee.

And you know youll need it from them claiming you're the one responsible for someone's sickness for caused by your unsafe RF causing it..By having your antenna to high where it causes more RF dangers to the public.

When we all know the real reason the person got RF sickness is because Palmdale required lower antenna height limits which increased the RF dangers to other people instead of raiding the antenna height limits to which decreases the RF dangers to other people. ;)

Palmdale: 4. Modifications. Any Conditional Use Permit for a ham radio antenna shall include a condition that the permittee shall report any changes to equipment or antenna structure from that authorized by the Conditional Use Permit and shall if necessary, obtain a modification to the Conditional Use Permit.
5. Inspection. Any use permit for a ham radio antenna shall include a condition that it shall be inspected annually to certify its safety and to verify that liability insurance is in effect and also that the ham radio equipment may be inspected without prior notice upon the receipt by the City of a complaint that the radio operation is causing interference with neighbors electronic devices due to the use of higher wattage than allowed by the FCC.

MeL Isn't this a matter for the FCC? When did Palmdale get the right to do ham radio and wattage inspections?

And to certify whether your ham radio is safe or not?

They probably don't even know all of the technical requirements the FCC requires.

And if there really is interference to the neighbors' devices, aren't those part 15 devices which by federal fcc law are REQUIRED to accept all interference they recieve.

So what is Palmdale doing investigating ham radio operators' radios in those cases?

When no federal or fcc laws are being broken by those ham radios.

Although there's plenty of federal and fcc laws being beiken by Palmdale in those cases, along with Palmdale breaking state law.

Palmdale: The City shall provide this inspection service at applicant’s cost. Permittees shall pay an annual inspection fee adopted by Resolution of the City Council in an amount sufficient to reimburse the City for an inspector qualified to inspect amateur radio equipment.
6. Antennas and supporting structures shall be a neutral, non-glossy, non-reflective color (i.e., earth-tones, black, gray) and be located in the most inconspicuous location possible to receive and transmit signals. An antenna which uses or is composed of perforated metals, radar mesh or wire screen, thereby reducing the antenna's visual mass, is encouraged.
7. Approval by the City shall not be deemed as approval by a homeowners' association pursuant to any covenants, conditions, and restrictions (CC & R’s).
8. Any equipment on the base of an antenna or antenna support structure shall be screened subject to the approval of the approving authority.
9. Anti-climb devices shall be installed at the base of the antenna tower if required by the approving authority.

Me: Then how will we be able to climb up there to make modifications to the antennas if required by the FCC???? ;)

okay. I know that's usualy to protect kids and other people from climbing it.

Palmdale: Building Permit.
When required by the Palmdale Building Code, a building permit shall be obtained for the installation of any exterior antenna. The Building Official shall determine that the antenna is in compliance with all applicable sections of the Palmdale Building Code and any local regulations prior to issuance of the building permit.
Time Limit. Any antenna permit granted pursuant to the provisions of this Section shall be developed and utilized within a period not to exceed twelve (12) months from and Memo to the Planning Commission
Zoning Ordinance Amendment (ZOA) 08-04
after the date of the granting of such permit, and, if not so developed and utilized, such permit automatically shall become null and void at the expiration of such twelve (12) month period.
Abandonment. The owner of a permitted facility shall submit written verification annually that the facility is operative. Any antenna structure and related equipment regulated by this Section that is inoperative or unused for a period of six (6) consecutive months shall be deemed abandoned and declared a public nuisance. Removal of the abandoned structure shall follow the procedures set forth in Chapter 8.10, Public Nuisances and Abatement Procedures, of the Palmdale Municipal Code

Me: Definitely an attack on all ham radio operators and all ham radio operation. What if you're sick for more than six months at one time ? Then you're in violation of the law. After all, we all know how all the ham operators constantly talk about their health problems and doctors' operations over the air. ;)

.Palmdale: Antennas and antenna support structures legally installed, i.e. with all required approvals and permits, prior to the effective date of this section shall be deemed to be legally nonconforming. All antennas legally installed prior to the effective date of the ordinance codified in this section which do not conform to the foregoing development standards shall be discontinued and removed from their site, or brought into compliance with said development standards within three (3) years from the effective date of the ordinance codified in this section. Those installed without required approvals and permits shall remain illegal and shall be removed immediately.

General Plan Consistency
This Zoning Ordinance Amendment is consistent with the goals, objectives and policies of the City’s General Plan. General Plan Objective S2.6 provides that the City should “Minimize exposure of residents to other man-made hazards, to the extent feasible.”
Further, General Plan Policy S2.6.2 provides that “To the extent permitted by law, work cooperatively with the applicable agencies and homeowners to eliminate/modify sources which interfere or disrupt emergency communications including, but not limited to, improperly installed or operated Ham and citizen band radios.”

Me: When did HOMEOWNERS ASSOCIATIONS get the authority to decide if ham radio and cb radios are improperly installed or improperly operated.

I THOUGHT that only the FCC has the authority to do that regarding ham radio.

Palmdale is a reasom why the FCC should have NEVER ever turned over CB regulation to the local governments like they did.

Palmdale gave HOMEOWNERS ASSOCIATIONS the authority to regulate and determine whether you are operating your CB radio legally or not and whether you are operating your cb radio safely or not.

And it all seems to be legal as far as CB is concerned, since the FCC gave local cities like Palmdale the authority to regulate and enforce CB radio and Palmdale allows the homeowners associations to regulate and enforce CB under Palmdale's authority to do so.

Palmdale: The proposed Zoning Ordinance Amendment establishes standards which accommodate amateur radio service communications but which regulate the size, location, height and screening of antennas which is necessary for the preservation of the health, safety and welfare of the community. Further, the amendment as proposed provides a more stringent regulation of antennas as is necessary in residential areas compared to nonresidential areas in order to preserve neighborhood compatibility and the open vistas and appearance of the community.
Zoning Ordinance Amendment (ZOA) 08-04

In addition, the proposed amendment, to the extent permitted by Federal law, sets forth certain standards for the operation of the amateur radio antenna to limit unreasonable interference with electrical equipment in the surrounding neighborhood which is incompatible with that neighborhood.

Me: So according to Palmdale, now even if your whole neighborhood is completely okay with your ham antenna and a surrounding neighborhood that is NOT part of your neighborhood doesn'tlike you having it, you're in violaion of the law.

Palmdale: The proposed standards require the submittal of information to demonstrate the need for increased antenna height and the operators ability to communicate in a reasonable manner without the increased height.
Further, Zoning Ordinance Amendment 08-04 is consistent with the General Plan Policy S4.1.1 which states, “Adopt appropriate codes to assure minimum standards to safeguard health, safety and public welfare by regulating the use and occupancy, location and maintenance of structures within the City” because the proposed changes to Section 95.03 of the Zoning Ordinance sets forth standards to ensure that antennas are located on parcels of adequate size and with adequate setbacks from adjacent uses. Standards are also proposed to ensure adequate structural integrity of antenna structures to protect public health and safety.
ENVIRONMENTAL REVIEW
An environmental initial study was prepared in accordance with the California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA), which determined that proposed Zoning Ordinance Amendment 08-04 to amend Section 95.03, Vertical Antennas of the Zoning Ordinance will not have a significant impact on the environment.
CONCLUSION
The proposed Zoning Ordinance Amendment provides regulations to ensure that residential television and amateur radio antennas are designed, installed and located in a way that avoids hazards to public health and safety, minimizes adverse aesthetic effects, and is compatible with the surrounding neighborhood by preventing adverse visual, health, safety, and other impacts on the surrounding properties and/or the community while at the same time reasonably accommodating amateur radio service

communications.

Very disturbing is Palmdale's law (if the proposed ordinance passes or did it already pass?) which gives Homewowner Associations the authority to determine if you are operating your ham radio (or CB) within RF safety limits or not. And if you're operating your ham radio (or CB) legally or not. And how much power wattage you can use.

Are those people even going to know what the legal FCC rules are abvout RF safety exposure limits???

And if so, are they even going to follow them if they decide they theirsselves don't like the look of any antennas and so there should be none???

If they trylyknew theFCC rules and were truly concerned about RF safety exposure to the public, they would be complaining that you must make your antenna higher, no lower.

If they claim to be concerned about rf safety exposure limits to other people and tell you have to lower your antenna to comply with rf laws to reduce rf exposure to other people, then you know that they're NOT going by the real true FCC rules about RF exposure.

And know that they're NOT qualified to make such deccisions.

However, notice that they also exempted their own selves from the very rules that they are trying to impose on ham radio operators.

Also, they claim it's to eliminate interference to other electronics by ham radio

They obviously don't understand 47 C.F.R. 15 ("Part 15") which basically says that unlicensed devices must accept interference from licensed services. They've got it backwards.

From my reading of Palmdale's rules/laws, I get that even if you don't have any outside antennas at all and are only operating indoors, either Palmdale or Homeowners Associations can come into your house and deermine whether you're operating your ham radio or cb within rf safety limits or not, and whether you're operating your ham radio or cb legally or not.

They definitely either don't understand the federal FCC laws, or do understand them and are purposely ignoring them.

Don't mean shit any way, everything is going digital..and again ONLY the FCC has jurisdiction over RF and interference from RF

OK, SHIT FOR BRAINS, see I can use my cap lock and talk lid too.
Nevertheless, I went to school and yes, this is not Amateur Radio, but if you'll talk like this here then you'll talk like that on 3,945 too.

It's sad that a foul-mouthed toddler like yourself join Amateur Radio and why you should quit too. Furthermore, why you feel the need to file lawsuits like little kids in a school yard, you're all LIDS!

As to my identity, well when your dealing with ignorant infants it simply to see why someone would conceal their identity.

There's a real problem here: Top posting. That makes you PKB.

Top posting is considered to be a sign of Usenet ignorance, and its practitioners have been looked down upon for years as clueless newbies. Top posting makes it nearly impossible to properly quote a long thread, and veteran Usenet users simply don't do it. Top posting is also considered to be the mark of a lazy poster.

BTW, neither Todd nor Mark are on the air, so they aren't real hams. Mark is RRAP's resident spammer, and Todd is its court jester. Both do their jobs well.

Wendy's uses the highest quolity meat then the other place's, but as far as

I don't remember if I ever heard Todd's station or not. I don't think I ever did since I wasn't listening to the shortwave very much at that time.

However, I have seen the latters from the FCC to them, and there is absolutely no mention of the "field strength" power that Todd was using in it.

There is mention of the amount of watts Todd used in it.

However, the FCC has previously told us they go by field strength, not watts.

The letters from the FCC clearly show that the FCC has no idea at all what the field strength power readings of Todd's station was at the time.

Other people will say, well quit reading Todd's site and look on the FCC's site instead.

Well, for your information, I did see those FCC letters I'm talking about on the FCC's own website.

I've never seen them on Toddd's site even if he has them up.

Because I was reading the FCC's own website instead.

They clearly have no idea what the field strength of Todd's station was at the time, and therefore shouldn't have sent him a NAL unless they knew for sure that he was over the legal field strength limits for a part 15.

Ever since getting rippedoff by Steam and Valve videogames, I'm verbally standing up for

No. But as I sid, there are very serious legal implications to it, eeven if you don't go there. Such as if you're in a car accident through no fault of your own and your car just happens to land on BK property.

Aren't there other junk > food places in your town?-

Yes. But they're all closed due to road construction.

They even have signs up on those restaurants saying that the restaurants are curently closed due to road construction.

The road construction there has been going on there for a few years now, and the finished parts of the road are now worse than before they began!!!

The road didn't need any road construction at all. Until after they decided and started doing it.

Okay, they're not all closed.

Some are.

That's ok it was very weak any way, the vast majority of people that did hear it, heard it in the noise level.

That's correct, Riley based the letter sent to me, on information he had received from ham radio operators who wanted me off the amateur bands, it is these same amateur radio operators before that who complained and had me kicked off all my ISP. The FCC measures Part 15 in field strength, not the wattage, unlike ham operators who thinks it's the wattage.

No they didn't here's Riley's first letter http://www.mediafire.com/?qmlre1fwcjm read what Riley said what the field strength is suppose to be and get a copy of Part 15.225 and tell me if Riley know what the hell he was talking about

§ 15.225 Operation within the band 13.110–14.010 MHz.

(a) The field strength of any emissions within the band 13.553–13.567
shall not exceed 15,848 microvolts/meter at 30 meters.

(b) Within the bands 13.410–13.553 MHz and 13.567–13.710 MHz, the field strength
of any emissions shall not exceed 334microvolts/meter at 30 meters.

(c) Within the bands 13.110–13.410 MHz and 13.710–14.010 MHz the field strength of any emissions shall not exceed 106microvolts/meter at 30 meters.

(d) The field strength of any emissions appearing outside of the 13.110– 14.010 MHz band shall not exceed the general radiated emission limits in § 15.209.

(e) The frequency tolerance of the carrier signal shall be maintained within ±0.01% of the operating frequency over a temperature variation of ¥20 degrees to +50 degrees C at normal supply voltage, and for a variation in the primary supply voltage from 85% to 115% of the rated supply voltage at a temperature of 20 degrees C. For battery operated equipment, the equipment tests shall be performed using a new battery.

Well, the fact is that you never actually mentioned cameras. You rambled on about some sort of radio-connected backup lights and only indirectly hinted that they might be capable of transmitting pictures. I never heard of such lights and still don't really know what you're talking about. What I do know is that no restaurant can force you to eat their burgers and that if you don't like the rules they enforce on their property, you can go eat somewhere else.

They have a McDonalds at the visitor entrance to Tampa General Hospital..

I got weak once and ordered a double cheeseburger.
I stand strong when I say 100% beef means lungs and stomachs.

I will never eat at McDonalds again.

Well, I don't care what you like for I have posted on newsgroups for years. I dislike having to always scroll to the bottom of messages just to read someones reply.

Consequently, if you don't like it then don't read it for I can careless what you LIDS like or not. This is my way and that's your way. I will not read those long lam bottom posted messages as it wastes time and hard to follow who posted what. Plus, I sometimes remove all, but what I'm replying too so people can follow along.

Now do yourself and everyone a favor - Don't waste your time wailing anymore regarding the way I post or reply for your whimpering to the four winds.

This too is also why Amateur Radio's Death is Imminent. Knit picking over protocols on the Amateur Radio when all we have to do is follow the FCC Rules, not someone's or some groups protocols. Protocols are just recommendations like top posting that people can choose to follow or not, where FCC Regulations YOU MUST FOLLOW or face FCC penalties.

Yet, people like yourself act as if Top Posting is a RULE rather than a recommendation same as on Amateur Radio and turn people off, this is why BLOGS are replacing the Usenet for it's Death is Imminent too.

Amateur Radio's Death is Imminent!

I think the phrase you are looking for is "I could not care less". If you can care less, then you must care some, and notice that in this case it is "care less" two words. Talk about LIDs.

Actually, that is true, due to a new ruling. Start at this URI:

http://yro.slashdot.org/yro/08/12/08/1515211.shtml

There you will discover that an Australian judge just ruled that "The Simpsons" cartoons can be child pornography. Under rulings like that one, Toad could do serious jail time.

Who is PKB for I do not have a clue and why dose it matter who I am? I'm either correct or incorrect about Amateur Radio Policy, and I am only trying to get a discussion going on the topic at hand. Amateur Radio's Death is Imminent, and by the way this discussion is going here it seems no one cares one way or the other. Usenet Death is Imminent too for I am receiving better response on web BLOG's then this infantile, spam infested troop of LIDS.

Oh that's no problemo! Your blogs are supplying dirty cartoons 24/7 to any Australian who wants to view it. The Aussies won't need you to be carrying anything, because they'll have all the evidence they need on Blogspot.

You are so wrong about so many laws. Now that the Oz supreme court has declared certain cartoons to be child porn, you would be well advised to stay out of that beautiful country.

The long arm of the law can do a lot of things you would not think.
Remember, we went to 'arrest' Noriega in Panama because he was supposedly helping send drugs to the US. Also, any US citizen that goes to a foreign country and commits certain crimes in that country can be prosecuted under US law when they come home even if they are not crimes in the country they went to. It's all a really twisted mess. You'd best not do anything that's a crime anywhere..

Yes it is pitiful that you don't know the law and yet go around lecturing everyone else.

Ever hear of Dmitry Sklyarov? Probably you haven't. Way back in 2001, the Russian software developer attended a conferance in Vegas, and was promptly arrested by the FBI.

Reason: Dmitry sold software which was LEGAL IN RUSSIA from his web site, and that software violated U.S. law. When Dmitry visited the U.S., he was arrested. An old article about the arrest can be found at law.com here:

http://www.law.com/regionals/ca/stories/edt0720a.shtml

I suggest that you read that 2001 article in its entirety, and then that you do some research to find out what happened afterward. Bottom line:
People CAN and HAVE been arrested when entering a country for violating that country's laws from a foreign web site, and it has happened more than once.

Understood. I'm simply making a statement, and Oz could well have a similar law in place (many countries do now).

Brenda,

My point is this person is a troll trying to side step the topic and push this newsgroup alt.radio.pirate down the toilet just like he did with amateur newsgroups. The original topic was about my FOIA (Freedom of information Act) request from the FCC in regards to my so-called "Pirate" radio station and this person is trying to drag stupid stuff into the topic...I have a lot respect for you, but this person who is pushing the topic about anime is a TROLL.

Define "Imminent" I have been hearing about the death of ham radio for decades. Everytime some new change occurs, somebody or some group comes out and declares that we are on the brink of ham radio's extinction. The bands are chock full of signals as I spin the VFO at this moment, it does not sound dead to me. If you want to stop the alleged death of ham radio, get on the air, it is as simple as that.
Or choose to not get on the air. It is your choice.

Mark, stop your whining, I have been gone for almost a year, and yet you still whine like a girl, you are what is wrong with ham radio.
And from what I read, your local ham club agreed when they threw you out of office.

I don't know who was responsible, but my hat is off to them, congrats come on comparing Todd to Noriaga is realy silly guys

Nobody's comparing anyone to Noriega. I'm talking about how the US (and other countries) are taking their control freak attitudes to extremes, and enforcing their laws on the citizens of other countries IN those countries (as well as their citizens traveling to those other countries.

I pulled Noriega's name out as an example of what the US can and does do to enforce their laws on other countries. This is not a comparison of anyone with Noriega, only an example of the law.

Brenda,

Give up now, once this KB9 fellow uses profanity towards you ("bullshit"), you are doomed to be on the path to eventually be deemed as a person who is personally attacking him. If you continue, you will watch this thread snowball into a big conspriacy against him and a race for him to always have the last word. Then if you continue to further argue the point, he will begin to flood the newsgroup with "Benda" rants. Please, do us a favor and stop now while you still have a chance.

I did not answer a post not addressed to me, I gave someone a justified warning about you, because you act like a mental patient and kook, but the fact that you cannot see the difference proves my point.
And once again you answered a post not directed to you, her post was in response to a poster using "MarkMorgan@chickenpoop.org" not you. So in essecense you broke the rules again. You can't seem to mind your own posts and affairs

That's also what I was taught by the U.S. public schools. That if it is legal in your country, you can't be arrested and held or jailed for it by another country een if it's illegal in those other countries unless you did it while you were physically present in the countries where it's illegal.

Howver, several other posters are saying otherwise.

And claim that it has been done.

And I myself have seen websites by a U.S. ham claiming he was fined by the FCC while legally operating FROM Mexico with a legal Mexican ham license since he could not legally operate from Mexico with a U.S. ham license since Mexico did not accept U.S. licenses and still might not. Under Mexican law, Mexico required U.S. hams to get a Mexican ham license.

And by a Canadian ham claiming the FCC fined him for violating FCC rules when he was legally operating from Canada with a Canadian ham license and had never ever set foot on U.S. soil in his entire life, yet.

What Todd is claiming is exaxctly what I learned from the U.S. public school teachers through all of my school years.

That one isn't really so twisted. As I remember, you're e expected to follow the laws of the country you visit. And that's why you can be prosecuted for it when you come back home if you did something illegal in that country while physically presen in that country even if it's not illegal in your own country.

That's what I learned in U.S. public schools through all my school years.

the key words here are "while physically present"

Of course, you're right that it is a twisted mess since I heard that the law in certain Arab countries requires you to kill certain races and nationalities.

So not doing so while physically present in those countries can get you arrested and jailed for violating their law when you come back to your own country.

Yet doing so will also get you arrested and jailed when you come back to your own country since it's against the law to murder anyone under your own country's laws.

A real twisted mess.

Murder and Genocide should be illegal and against the law everywhere.

However, it seems the realiry ismuch different.

I still think it should be against the law everywhere.

The problem is they were publish in the United States and The server they are on is in the United States...thus the server and the publisher, who published the material in the united states must conform to US Laws. Now if I go over there (Australia, which I wouldn't because it's a second rate country) and have the material on me or publish the material on my blog while I was over there, which again I wouldn't go to a second rate country like Australia anyway.
The I'm under their law. Something that was already published on a site in one country can be prosecuted some five, ten years later in another country..AGAIN I WANT TO POINT OUT THAT IS NOT WHAT THIS THREAD IS ABOUT...YOU HAVE JACKASSES HIJACKING THREADS....I SUGGEST YOU MAROON READ THE THREAD AGAIN!!

The trouble with this is it means that a U.S. citizen can be arrested in Australia for posting a picture on a U.S. website while in the U.S. that he took of the statue in front of the U.S. courthouse while in the U.S. standing in the public park in front of the courthouse because some Australians think the naked statue looks "underage".

If I recall correctly, the Australian kids tv show that showed kids naked butts showed them in positions just as bad, or worse than Todd's pictures.

I'll never understand how Australia can rule and say that it's illegal porn to have pictures of drawings of kids' naked butts, boobs, and titsyet not illegal and not porn at all to have pictures of real kids' naked butts, boobs, and tits.

It just doesn't make sense.

However whatTodd and Mark have sais is what I and many other people in the U.S. have learned in U.S. public schools.

That if it was published while physically present in the U.S., that you can't be arrested or jailed for it while physically present in another country just because it's illegal in that other country, since you were not physically present in that other country when you published it.

Of course, make sure it's a U.S. website you publish it on.

4456. here's another ham who had non hoa non cc&r property takn over by HOAs and CC&Rs

I had never heard of hoas or CC&Rs until this past year when I read about them on the internet.

These were old articles,around 2002 or so, however,

I just read an article by ham who he and his wife both also had never heard of HOAs or CC&Rswhen they bought their new house which had a HOA & CC&R. They weren't disclosed until after they had already dold their own home and spent thousands of dollars in moving expenses which took them a long time to save up in order to move. So they had no choice, but to sign or else they would have lost those thousands of dollars since it was non-refundable and would have also been homeless.

I also just read about a ham in a city where a tower is allowed being sued by a hoa in another city because of his antenna being up!!!

Sinced it's against that hoas rules.

I also just read about another ham in a non-hoa non CC&R place who had his home taken over by HOAs and CC&Rs.

And the ham lost in court!!!

So once again, don't tell me it's just as easy as moving inrto a place without any HOAs or CC&Rs.

I know better from my own personal experiences.

Buying a home in a non CC&R area is even a risk (at least in Colorado). An employee of the company I work for is an engineer at a major satellite uplink facility near Denver, and also is a ham. He bought an acre out in a non restricted area where he put up his 50 foot tower, and all was fine until developers bought some land not too far away, and were able to push through CC&Rs that took in other lands in the area, including his acre. After several court hearings, the tower had to come down.

Not everyone lives in gated communities with swimming pools and that sort of thing, as has been brought up for examples here. If ya move there, well I tend to agree with others that you have nothng to holler about. But those are really a whole different story.

Reason would have it that in ordinary neighborhoods the goal is simply to keep things in order and not have junk piling up. And if a ham does put up an antenna, he should be reasonable too. Use a crankup, and crank it down when not using it. Paint it to match surroundings, or whatever is needed. But there need not be the same kinds of "hard" restrictions as for those special communities. As, for example, the ability of taking in other properties and making a guy on an acre of land down the road take his tower down. Something seems wrong here, and possibly worthy of attention before it gets too far out of control

No it isn't that simple.

2. I read about another ham in a non hoa non CC&R place who was fined and sued by a HOA in a completelydifferent city because they didn't like his antenna tower. And it was against the hoa's rules.

He didn't even live in the same city the hoa was in.

His property wasn't even anywhere near that hoa.

His property was not psart of any hoa or CC&Rs.

The hoa residents didn't like seeing it when they drove through HIS city on the way to and from their work

3. I read about another ham who specifically moved to a non hoa non CC&R place and his place was taken over by HOAs and CC&Rs by land developers making CC&Rs that attached his property to HOA CC&Rs when there had been absolutely none before.

He took them to court and lost!!!! The hoa won!!!!

1. I myself lived in a non HOA non CC&R place which had hoa CC&Rs imposed on it after a new landlord took over. It turned out he was a land developer building expensive townhouses who had somehow taken over by eminent domain even though only governments are supposed to be able to do that.

Wrong! You apparently didn't do your homework well enough. In 2001, Elcomsoft's servers were located only in Russia (Czech Republic). Only later did Elcomsoft contract with servers in North America (Chicago) to host its North American web site.

Technically, Dmitry was not arrested for selling his software; he was arrested for writing the software (in Russia) for Elcomsoft. Thus, he was arrested for something that he did legally in his own country.

> wouldn't because it's a second rate country) and have the material on Australia is hardly a "second rate" country. Only an ignoramus would make such an uninformed claim, but then you are, aren't you?

The subject of this thread has remained unchanged in my posts; thus it has not been hijacked. Look to your pal Smarmy Marky if you want to find that kind of behavior.

On the subject of your FOIA request, did you ever stop to consider that you might be calling attention to yourself all over again? If the bureaucracy happened to let any planned followup to your warning letters fall into the cracks, you have now assured that they will pull your file and reexamine everything.

There's a reason for that old saying to "let sleeping dogs lie," but you chose instead to walk over to the dog and kick it.

4471. the trouble with cb,frs, and ham radio

This sounds an awful lot like LID Dave Hall in Pennsylvania.

X-No-Archive: Yes

Yesterday, I rehooked up my cb, it was on channel 19, and the first thing I heard was someone calling someone else an ahole.

Then that "ahole" came on, and it was our local CB idiot who says on for hours at a time with about every other word coming out of his mouth being profanity and cuss words.

The kids around here do NOT need to hear tha kind of language or some of the X-rated things he was saying.

I sure hope they didn't hear that.

:Later, I turnen on the frs/gmrs radio and turned off the CB.

That was okay until the morning when someone started playing music on frs channel 1.

I might have said something except my frs/gmrs is 600 milliwatts on the frs/gmrsinstead of 500 milliwatts. And I don't have a license yet to transmit over 500 milliwatts on those channels and don't want to get one unless I get a good GMRS radio, a full 50 watts (out of the price range of what I can afford) or a 5 watt with a detachable antenna. So I didn't say anything on that channel.

Why emergency services on FRS is not a good idea.

One day, I loaned my frs radios to my neices (kids) and their dad. One of them then started pretending over the air like they were in the military being attacked by terrorists.

Nope. It wasn't the kids. It was their dad. So much for loaning your two-way radios to your "adult" brother-in-law.

With ham radio, the problem is the self-appointed radio cops who think they know everything when in fact they know nothing.

A friend of mine moved ffrom here to south carolina and when she came back here, her accent had changed to a south carolina.

From what I read, that's normal when people move to somewhere else. Their accent and language eventually changes to where they moved to.

The self-appointed radio cops hear someone from or living in the Appalachian mountains (even if they're not originally from there) saying "I'm going to go get me some dope now" or "I'm a gonna have me some dope now".

The next thing they know, the self-appointed radio cop has turned them into the federal government for illegal drug trafficking. And for using federally illegal drugs.

Whn in fact, no ssuch thing ever happened.

Then in court, the judge asks if they reallydid say "I'm gonna get me some dope". If trying to explain, they're responded to by the judge with "Just answer yes or no. Nothing else. Just yes or no. Did you say you were going to get some dope"

If honest, he answers yes, and ends up in federal prison for a crime he never ever committed just because of some smart-aleck know-it-all self-appointed radio cop who actually knows nothing.

In Appalachia, "dope" is commonly used to refer to any and all soft drinks, also known as soda pop in other parts of the country.

In some parts of the south, "Coke is used to mean any soft drink regardless of the brand.

There, a "Pepsi" is a "Coke".

So I'm guessing that maybe "dope" to mean "soda pop" in Appalachia came about because of Coca-Cola having cocaine in it in it's early days. And just stuck as part of the language.

Although I don't know if that's really where the word to mean that came from or not. Just my guess.

Okay, Dude. I admit it. I have some Appalachian background in my ancestry.

I eard from my relatives that other relatives of mine had a real hillbilly car.

You know, the kind that's all rusted out with the doors ready to fall off.

And I think cracked windows.

People thought that car would never ever make it back to California.

However, they hooked it up to a Greyhound Bus and made it back.

Of course, by the time the car got there, the tires and car were all burnt up.

But hey, they made it back to California in that car.

hmmmm... Dude, you said you're a redneck from California.

Was that you or your family or your relativves?

If so, we just might be cousins.

I see you are desperately dredging up old threads again with your lies and unfounded accusations. You are such a fool, Law enforcement apparently won't act on your false allegations, because as we all know you make up stories without any credible evidence whatsoever. You went on your little witch hunt attacking other hams which was a complete faliure on your part, but not a failure on thier's as you were impeached as President of the Copper Country Radio Amateur Association. You have been banned from several boards, and are ridiculed daily on others.

The only reason anyone pays any attention to you is just to see what stupid act you will do next. Get a life Mark Morgan KB9RQZ.

I met this gal in a bar and one thing lead to another. I said, "Let's go back to my place."
She said, "Oh, do you have cable?"
I said, "No, but I have some old ropes that should do just fine."

Following an especially angry argument, Mr. and Mrs. Smith went to bed not speaking to each other. Needing to arise early the following morning, Mr. Smith left a note on his wife's bedside table that said "Wake me at six."
An exasperated Mr. Smith awoke at ten the following morning and rolled stiffly out of bed to see a note on his bedside table:
"It's six, you bum! Get out of bed!"

The FCC has until January 6, 2009 to give any and all information on Todd E Daugherty, Omega One Radio, and complaints. If the FCC doesn't comply I will have no choice then go to the US District Court with a lawsuit against the FCC for not complying with the Freedom of Information Act. It would be in the FCC interest to give the information, I know there is a few people in congress watching the FCC and their activities and by not surrendering the information proves two things 1. The FCC did not have any REAL INFORMATION about Me or Omega One Radio and therefore the warning letter was nothing more then a farce by a employee of the FCC who had a grudge against me, and 2. it proves that the FCC supports this harassment by these individuals who feel it's their duty to call my employer in hopes to get me fired.

You can claim that if you like, but most people in Illinois know that the FIOA is our state Fags of Illinois Association. I had assumed that you were counting down to a chapter meeting in the Taylorville area.

Where shall we meet? Your place or mine?

Despite my liberal leanings, I agree with you, Brenda Ann.
Responsibly-wrought Zoning ordinances are one thing - fussy NIMBY CC&Rs are another. I live in an HOA that is not bad (we have no antenna restrictions that I know of). Some are not so lucky, but frankly, I've been told by County attorneys that it is pretty hard to make a CC&R-related "violation" stick in court. Still, one may have to go through the trouble to challenge them.

4633. not an antenna, but how would Palmdale like this???

Newsgroup: rec.radio.amateur.policy
Date: 2008-12-22 21:42:23 UTC
From: radioguy <radioguy222@yahoo.com>
Message-ID: <cc23b4e0-7489-4227-bdc9-113b89a7a280@d36g2000prf.googlegroups.com>
Source record: 234628

Unless I'm mityaken, this is NOT an antenna.

However, put up one of these in your yards, which is doing this All the time, and the city of Palmdale either

1. would not even dare to sneakily take it down by trespassing in your yard without your knowledge.

or

2. if they were stupid enough to do so, you would not have to worry about them trespassing in your anyymore or taking down any of your antennas or sstructures ever again .

just click on the link and take a look at the pictures.

And swls, it is NoT off topic for the swl group, despite your claims to the contrary. Palmdale is trying to pass an ordinance which limits all antennas to no more than one inch above the roofline and is claiming authority to tell hams what radio frequencies they are and are not allowed to operate on and how much power they are and are not allowed to transmit.

being fined money
even if it's completely indoors including the antenna, and forcing you to continnually have antenna liability insurance if you have any antenna as long as you have your antenna.

And claiming that the city has the authority to determine if you are operating your radio equipment safely or not and can confiscate your equipment if they determine so.

At least in the version of the ordinance I and some other hams read.

I thought only the FCC had the authority to do most, if not all of the above because

If Palmdale can legally force you to operate only on the frequencies they say, then what happens if they order you to operate your CB only on 28.960 mhz or order you to operate your ham radio only on 39.555 mhz and order that you must operate it at a certain tim and must be only on that frequency.

I thought only the FCC had that authority.

So if you don't, you're in court being fimed for violating the law

And if you do, you're in court for being fined for violating the law (the FCC's) and have to pay court costs you can't afford.

Well, from what I and other people saw in Palmdale's ordinace, it looks like they're outlawing mobile use of ham radio also.

And I know that according to it, the ordinance gives Palmdale the authority to tell you how mucch power you are and aren't allowed to run while transmitting on your ham radio.

I thought only the FCC had that authority.

How can Palmdale legally require you to not transmit over three watts
when the FCC clearly says you can legally transmit with up to one thousand five hundred watts.

How can Palmdale legally say you're not allowed to transmit with one thousand five hundred watts when the FCC clearly says you are legally allowed to???

I thought only the FCC had that authority.

How can Palmdale legally require you to not transmit over three watts

How can Palmdale legally say you're not allowed to transmit with one

Your "thread jacking" is an effort to steal threads you didn't start and is a form of harassment. I, OTOH, reset the topics to their original content in order to thwart you. Over time, I have been quite successful, and I am slowly beating your thefts back. You have currently failed to hijack a total of 32 restored threads.

Every time you hijack a thread, you extend the date that a law suit can be filed, so there is no timeout because of your own activities.
When it comes to "calling the cops", others have already taken care of that.

Soon, you're going to be just as surprised as you were on the night that the CCRAA impeached you.

If Federal law truly supercedes state law as hams claim they do, then how are local state laws prohibiting using scanners to monitor the police legal???

The federal ECPA law clearly says that monitoring police transmissions is specifically allowed.

From anywhere in the U.S.

And "anywhere" would inclide from a vehicle.

And if I recall correctly, the ECPA even goes so far as to say that monitoring of police may not be prohibited.

Just my .2 worth, as a truck driver we always go by the most stringent law be it the state,fed, or local, just to be on the safe side.

okay. After posting, I just tiik a look at the federal ecpa law again. And IF the hams are correct that federal law ALWAYS supercedes anf trumps local and state laws, then it is legal for cbers and other non-hams to have scanners in their vehicles no matter what state and local laws say.

The ECPA clearly says it shall not be unlawful to listen to police transmissions (as long as they're unencrypred).

And it does not mention any places where you're not allowed to listen to them.

In other words, it shall not be unlawful period to listen to police transmissions.

Anywhere within the U.S.

Unless of course the hams are wrong and state and local laws supercede and trump federal law.

Which is it?

state and local laws superceding and trumping federal law so non-hams listening to police transmissions in their vehicles is a crime.

or federal law superceding and trumping state and local laws so non-hams listening to police transmissions in their vehicles is not a crime.

copy of part of the text of the FEDERAL ecpa law:

"(g)it shall not be unlawful under this chapter or chapter 121 this title for Post p. 1860 any person---
"(i)to intercept or access an electronic communication made through an electronic communication system that is configured so that such electronic communication is readily accessible to the general public;
"(ii) to intercept any radio communication which is transmitted--
"(I) by any station for the use of the general public, or that relates to ships, aircraft, vehicles,

or persons in distress;
"(II)by any governmental, law enforcement, civil defense, private land mobile, or public safety communications system, including police and fire, readily accessible to the general public;"

There you have it, folks. It shall NOT be unlawful to intercept any radio communication which is transmitted by any governmental,LAW ENFORCEMENT,civil defense,private land mobile, or public communications system INCLUDING POLICE and fire, readily accessible to the general public (meaning not encrypted. If you can hear them on a regular analog scanner, they are definitely unencrypted.)

That is federal law.

"(III) by a station operating on an authorized frequency within the bands allocated to the amateur, citizens band, or general mobile radio services; or

Interesting because even after the ecpa passed, certain hams around my area told me that it is against the law to listen to ham radio at all on any radio reciever unless you have a ham radio license.

"(IV) by any marine or aeronautical communications system;

I've listened to the airband. Boring.

The problem with your logic chain starts with the assumption that federal law supercedes state laws. In some types of statues dealing with universal rights (freedom to vote, anti-segregation and other types of statues relating to civil rights) it does. When it comes to general regulations, deference is given to state and localities. Conservatives have long trumpeted this division of deference to be the linchpin of shared federalism between the national gov't and states.

Study constitutional law, it matters!

Irregardless of the ecpa, try to listen in on military tactical comms and let them find out about it.. they tend to call that espionage. Which is why most scanners don't have the tactical freqs. in them...

Also, it depends upon your USE of the intercepted comms. There is an enhancement for using a police scanner in furtherance of a crime.

Always better to hide the installation well and don't pick up any hitch hikers. Officer Dick Skreshun tells stories about people who lose their livelihood and all their money while bouncing back and forth until their day in court. Then he gets to keep all your seized and abandoned property.

Yes you should,
Ever hear of the commerce clause?

There are thousands of Federal laws that trump State laws.

The bad part about the issues at hand is the state can confiscate your stuff.
and you have to spend thousands to prove they were wrong.

You demanded that he "return your wife's call back to her" before you would release the blog you maintain with Dan's call...Dan does not have your wifes call. Therefore you are demanding that he do something that he cannot do.

Notice how it is commerce when you do it, but you call it blackmail when someone does the same to you. Double Standard Markie is your name.

It works both ways there are Federal laws that overule state laws and stae laws that overule federal laws. Kidnapping is a state crime but made federal if you cross a state line with the victim. All federal civil rights laws trump state laws unless the state's is more liberal.
I think most federal laws have a clause stating how they relate to state laws. As clear as mud isnt it. The American Civil Liberties Union is the place to contact tfor information on specific laws. I believe they have already been involved in some cases in Virginia.

That's probably what frustrates him the most. He has to sit on an

Complete with obligatory low frequency bass, electrically recorded on a four track in two hours. This has enough power to destroy the most expensive washing machine.

I informed my wife of some of Roger's/Not Roger's posts of the last twenty-four hours during our ride home this evening. The one he posted (as me) on alt.west-virginia bothered her enough that she insisted that we pay Wiseman a visit to discuss the material he is posting.

We parked our car in front of his home at 6:25 PM. It wasn't quite dark, but the living room lights were on. My wife rang the bell and there was no response. She rang again and we heard footsteps crossing the room. The light shining through the peephole in the door extinguished as Roger peered out, but the door didn't open. He moved away from the door and the light from the living room shone through the peephole again. My wife rang the bell again and said, "Coward" loud enough for anyone inside to have heard. We stood on the porch for another few moments and returned to the car. Neither Roger nor his imaginary friend appeared.

It seems that the unbalanced UnWiseman isn't the bold, fearless type he portrays in his Usenet filth postings.

Roger is a humbug.

This was e-mailed to me this morning by Oris Grim an old friend.

I happened to be traveling through Huntsville, Alabama early this morning, I deceided to stop in Athens and see just how tough Lloyd Davies was going to act when he saw me in person.

Many of you know that a few years ago, Lloyd got smart with several people in the Deja Newsgroup (now Google) and I issued a challenge to him. I told him I would be attending the Dalton, Ga. Hamfest if he wanted to continue the conversation. He said he would be there and he was going to kick my ass.

Well, Lloyd was a no-show and continued the verbal assault on the newsgroups. He always talks tough behind his keyboard. And, I understand he is now doing the same sort of thing on the NIM Busters Board.

Well, about 8.35 this morning (December 23, 2004) I located his apartment in a nasty looking section of town. I'm a pretty good sized man, but I put my gun in my back waistband after exiting the car. I located his apartment and knocked on the door. The doorbell was missing and bare wires were sticking out of the wall. I heard someone say I'm coming and shortly the door opened with a safety chain lock still engaged. He asked what I wanted and I introduced myself and asked if we could have a conversation. He turned white as a sheet and attempted to slam the door, but I already had a foot wedged in the opening. He started shaking uncontrollably and was shouting leave me alone, leave me alone! I told him he didn't seem so tough now face to face and then noticed a putrid odor of urine and he was pissing his pants and crying like a baby. Please leave me alone Oris he said, I was just having fun and meant no harm, please leave, please. I could see the filthy floor of this apartment and the dirty floors and the stench of a grown man pissing on himself were almost enough to make me want to vomit, and I don't have a queasy stomach. Upon telling him that this time he would escape a ass kicking and not to ever get a smart mouth with me again and a verbal yes from him, I departed. That apartment complex looked like a crackhouse, niggers everywhere, filthy grounds and stairwells. Junk cars everywhere and garbage overflowing the garbage cans.

This Lloyd is nothing more than white trash that delivers pizzas and could afford to take a trip out of town if the ticket cost $5.00.

I'm sending this to a friend who despises Lloyd Davies and he wanted to post it for everyone to see just what kind of chickenshit asshole this Davies really is.

Oris Grim

Not only did "Todd" aka Lllllllllllllloyd hide from Oris once, he hid from Oris twice.......at the Dalton hamfest.

4884. MINUTES OF THE JULY 1, 2008 CCRAA MEETING.... Michigan Amateur Radio club impeaches their president, kb9rqz

Source record: 234829

MINUTES OF THE JULY 1, 2008 CCRAA MEETING (No minutes were available at the July meeting) MINUTES OF THE AUGUST 5, 2008 MEETING The meeting opened at 7:02 pm EDT with the Secretary (KD8CTL) reading the minutes of the July 1, meeting. (Not reported during the July meeting) They included a report from the Property committee showing that the clubhouse is in good shape, and all systems were working. No other committee reports were available. Since there was a health issue with the present Secretary, Gavrielah Hojnacki (KD8CTL)
George, W8FWG offered his services to fill in the remainder of her term as "Acting > Secretary." This offer was accepted by the existing Secretary, and > approved by the President, with an amendment to serve up to the time of the next election in March of 2009.
This was agreed to by George, W8FWG. Self introductions followed, with the following radioamateurs present at the meeting: KD8CTL, KB9RQZ, N8ZBJ, WA8JSF, W8ERB, W9VLM, W8ILS, W4KAR, WB8ZYL, WA8QNF, K6IPC, W8DAO, KB8XI and W8FWG. Our President voiced concern of the ongoing uncertainly of the operation of our 146.670 MHz repeater in Herman. George, W8FWG reported for Chuck, WB8FCY, that this property may have already been sold by the DNR, to a radio or TV broadcasting company but that we had no assurance that that had taken place. Georgeoffered to contact the DNR (a ham in the DNR, whom he knows) to get the latest information on that site, and to report back to the President of the club, ASAP.
Treasurer's Report: By Paul, W9VLM, indicated we have received a request from the State of Michigan regarding our charter and status as a non-profit organization. This means a charge of $20 annually, and the Treasurer was instructed to pay it.

At 7:36 pm Gavrielah had to leave suddenly (no reason given) and the roster of those present was turned over to George, W8FWG.

Glenn, WA8QNF asked this question of the President. "Mark, in the interest of the CCRAA would you be willing to step down as President of the organization.?"

The answer given by Mark was a resounding "No!"

In view of the "turbulence" that occurred, theProperty Chairman's report (W8FWG's report) did not get read, but it is included here as follows: All utilities within the building are operational, and the weekly routines are being kept up, the monthly check of the emergency engine was completed, an additional operating chart was made up and a new antenna tuning guide was added.
The lawn was not mowed, per the President's request, because of his allergy to newly mown grass.

The water leak at the roof has been corrected and one problem with a door switch remains and that should be taken care before the next meeting.
Cataloging of the small parts cabinet continues, and now that we have a new computer this should be completed by year's end..

A motion made by Glenn, WA8QNF and seconded by Roy, WB8ZYL to "Remove Mark, KB9RQZ from the office of President of the CCRAA" was introduced, and a discussion followed. When it came to a vote, there was one ABSTENTION, one NO vote, 11 YES votes, and the motion carried. George, W8FWG, being appointed Acting Secretary took ending notes.
The next meeting of the CCRAA is scheduled to be held at the Osceola Clubhouse on September 2, 2008 at 7:00pm EDT. Since there was no longer a quorum (without a President or Vice President present), a motion to adjourn was entertained by Roland, KB8XI and seconded by Glenn, WA8QNF, and the meeting adjourned at 8:45pm EDT

They're not. Neither are radar detectors or full range radio receivers of any sort (including cell phone coverage). The latter "restriction" bought and paid for by the same telcos that have been illegally tapping your phone lines for the past 8+ years. Of course, if never challenged, they'll take as many of your freedoms as you'll give.

Federal law and International Treaty clearly state that monitoring any frequency is legal.

Naturally.

Of course.

But it's okay to put cartoon images of adults raping babies on a blog, isn't it Todd? Other people think that ANYONE who does that is also a F-ING SCUMBAG...

As to your religion of atheism, that's another topic. Jew, Catholic, or athiest, they all are religions which claim they can prove something (God exists; God doesn't exist - flip sides of the same coin). I don't think you know the first thing about such concepts, but because you need to justify your otherwise unacceptable sexual tastes, you choose athiesm as your way out and your way to express your hate of others who disapprove of you.

Mark, otoh, takes an ancient religion, mixes it with paganistic notions, and comes up with a home-brew "religion" that is just as self serving and ignorant as your own athiesm.

Bah.

Roger is a broken record, playing endlessly on Usenet. No one ever believes his posts, but he continues year after year anyway. It must be an embarrasment to his very successful cousin Ron Wiseman, the king of Jewish Reggae (http://www.ronwiseman.com).

I never claimed to be an atheist, I just hate jackass who put religion into everything. Religion isn't as great as you all think...after all the vast majority of problems in the world from the past to the present is caused by religion.

I've study the ancient religions from Sumeria to Shinto to everything in between, even the whacked out religions...there is no law that states you can't start your own religion or take parts from different religions and make it your own.

As a result of 28 years of military service and losing a home to Hurricane Katrina, I have moved a lot -- 29 moves since 1967. I have bought and sold six houses and built three. IN EVERY CASE where there was a HOA or POA, I asked the real estate agent with whom I was working to give me a copy of the covenants and I had them within hours.

HOA/POA CC&R are public information, on file in your local courthouse along with the deeds and property transfer records.

Also, you could simply knock on the door of a home in the neighborhood, introduce yourself, find out who is the HOA president, and ask him/her for a copy.

Check out the poll at http://nimbusters.org/forum/poll/index.php?dispid=101 for details. Needless to say, Woger Wiseman is dejected at losing his long standing status as yearly CoTY, but the times are changing.

Question: Should the acronym be "CoTY" or "CSoTY?" We need to know the correct form before engraving Marky's award plaque.

At the moment, the DOJ is trying a test case. Once there is no possibility of appeal, and if the Protect Act of 2003 stands, the DOJ will then persue other cartoon child porn cases. I would expect the issue to be resolved during 2009, followed by the DOJ going after U.S. based anime sites. The outlawing of cartoon child pornography is becoming a world wide trend (Australia, Canada, U.S., etc.), and you're on the wrong side of the power curve, Toad.

If you had read the article, you would know that the next step in the case is to ask the full circuit court for a review, followed by a petition to the Supreme Court if the review fails.

Better encrypt all your cartoon porn, Toad. The courts have also ruled that you can't be forced to give LE your decryption password.

MORON...it failed

The first conviction of a person found to have violated the sections of the act relating to virtual child pornography, Dwight Whorley of Virginia, was upheld in a 2-1 panel decision of the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals in December 2008

What's neat is this case:

CBLDF To Serve As Special Consultant In PROTECT Act Manga Case

The Comic Book Legal Defense Fund has signed on as a special consultant to the defense of Chistopher Handley, an Iowa collector who faces up to 20 years in prison for possession of manga. The Fund adds its First Amendment expertise to the case, managed by United Defense Group's Eric Chase, and will also be providing monetary support towards obtaining expert witnesses.

Handley, 38, faces penalties under the PROTECT Act (18 U.S.C. Section 1466A) for allegedly possessing manga that the government claims to be obscene. The government alleges that the material includes drawings that they claim appear to be depictions of minors engaging in sexual conduct. No photographic content is at issue in Handley's case.

"Handley's case is deeply troubling, because the government is prosecuting a private collector for possession of art," says CBLDF Executive Director Charles Brownstein. "In the past, CBLDF has had to defend the First Amendment rights of retailers and artists, but never before have we experienced the Federal Government attempting to strip a citizen of his freedom because he owned comic books. We will bring our best resources to bear in aiding Mr. Handley's counsel as they defend his freedom and the First Amendment rights of every art-loving citizen in this country."

Mr. Handley's case began in May 2006 when he received an express mail package from Japan that contained seven Japanese comic books. That package was intercepted by the Postal Inspector, who applied for a search warrant after determining that the package contained cartoon images of objectionable content. Unaware that his materials were searched, Handley drove away from the post office and was followed by various law enforcement officers, who pulled him over and followed him to his home. Once there, agents from the Postal Inspector's office, Immigration and Customs Enforcement Agency, Special Agents from the Iowa Division of Criminal Investigation, and officers from the Glenwood Police Department seized Handley's collection of over 1,200 manga books or publications; and hundreds of DVDs, VHS tapes, laser disks; seven computers, and other documents. Though Handley's collection was comprised of hundreds of comics covering a wide spectrum of manga, the government is prosecuting images appearing in a small handful.

Putting the case into context, Burton Joseph, CBLDF's Legal Counsel says, "In the lengthy time in which I have represented CBLDF and its clients, I have never encountered a situation where criminal prosecution was brought against a private consumer for possession of material for personal use in his own home. This prosecution has profound implications in limiting the First Amendment for art and artists, and comics in particular, that are on the cutting edge of creativity. It misunderstands the nature of avant-garde art in its historical perspective and is a perversion of anti-obscenity laws."

Eric Chase and his team at the United Defense Group have been vigorously defending Handley, and scored a major First Amendment victory earlier this year when the judge found portions of the PROTECT Act unconstitutional in his ruling on a motion to dismiss. District Judge Gritzner of the Southern District of Iowa found that subsections 1466(a)(2) and (b)(2) of 18 U.S.C. 1466A unconstitutional. Those sections make it a crime to knowingly produce, distribute, receive, or possess with intent to distribute, "a visual depiction of any kind, including a drawing, cartoon, sculpture, or painting," that "is, or appears to be" a minor engaged in sexual conduct. Judge Gritzner found that those sections restrict protected speech and are constitutionally infirm.

Handley now faces charges under the surviving sections of 1466A, which will require a jury to determine whether the drawings at issue are legally obscene. The material cannot be deemed obscene unless it meets all three of the criteria of the Miller test for obscenity: "(a) whether the average person, applying contemporary community standards would find that the work, taken as a whole, appeals to the prurient interest; (b) whether the work depicts or describes, in a patently offensive way, sexual conduct specifically defined by the applicable state law; and (c) whether the work, taken as a whole, lacks serious literary, artistic, political, or scientific value." The jury must answer all three questions in the affirmative in order to convict.

Eric Chase recognized the importance of the case, and of the CBLDF's contribution to it, in a statement to the CBLDF: "This case represents the latest in a string of efforts by the Department of Justice to encroach on free speech. The United Defense Group is committed to fighting to maintain the protections guaranteed in the Constitution, and we appreciate the CBLDF's support in this fight."

About the Comic Book Legal Defense Fund
The Comic Book Legal Defense Fund was founded in 1986 as a 501 (c) 3 non-profit organization dedicated to the preservation of First Amendment rights for members of the comics community. Fascinating how you can read an article and see only what you want to see. It appears that you don't let reality inconvenience you.

I'll repeat what is already written in major news sources and dated only one week ago: The lawyer for the defendant still can go before the full court (as opposed to the panel of three judges which just heard the appeal), and he can petition the Supreme Court. He has said that he intends to do both, and he said that approximately one week ago.

Cartoon child porn is being backed into a corner. The feds have even followed a guy home who picked up manga comic books at his post office and they then arrested him.

You'd better start looking over your shoulder, Todd.

Todd, it does not matter. Time marches on and things change. Over time social views seem to dictate the law, and the current social environment is against anything, whether real or not, that depictes children in a lewd or lacivous manner, such as animie.

Personally, no bearing about how I feel about you personally, I would vote in an affirmative that your flavor of "art" passes the Miller Test. I believe, and most would agree that it arouses you and others like you, it is offensive, and it has no literary, artistic, political, or scientific value.

The 4th circuit is just the first of the courts that will probably side with the moral majority. Just as homosexuality was once defined as a mental disorder, and was illegal in many states, it found social acceptance by the majority, and thus most laws banning such was overturned.

However, the opposite appears to be true about your kiddie porn cartoons, an thankfully, the courts will side with the majority and outlaw this type of sick perversion.

Not according to the courts and law here. After the courthouse clerks' claims, I looked up the law on the internet and there really is an actual law herewhich makes it illegal for the courthouse employees or anyone else to give you a copy of those recods unless it's to a lawyer who has requested them, and makes it illegal for you to recieve a copy of tem by anyone unless you have a lawyer to get them. They're not public records since the public is NOT allowed to get copies of them, only lawyers are. I also thought they were public records from what everyone else was saying on the internet, until I actualy found out otherwise by actually being down at the courthouse.

So once again, just because I'm not rich enough to hire a lawyer, there is no freaking possible way I can find out what any CC&R restrictions are or even whether there's a hoa or not in the place I'm moving into until AFTER I have already signed an agreement to move in there.

Since they don't give you copies of the CC&Rs unti AFTER you have already agreed to move in and since you can't get copies off CC&Rs before you make an agreement to move in and can't even find out if there is even a hoa there or not before you move in since it is illegal to do so since they are NOT public records, by law.

This is just more of the usual government discrimination against poor people since poor people are not allowed to get copies of HOA or CC&R restrictions before they make an agreement to move into any place while rich people are allowed to get such copies before making an agreement to move into any place since they can afford a lawyer who are the only ones allowed to request and get such documents.

then the hoa nazis finee you for not wearing the clothes they want you to be wearing, for things you do INSIDE of your own home even where they can't see what you're doing, and for eating normal American food here in America since it made one non-American family living in a HOA here in America sick and nauseous to see Americans eating American food.

So the American family had to eat only non-American foods that the other hoa family agreed with which the American family wasnt used to and made the American family sick and nauseous because of hoa rules that that was the only food they were allowed to eat in their own home from now on.

From my understanding, it was a completely separate house, not a condo or townhome.

And hams, that does have to do with ham radio. I just forgot to put that in my first post since I was tired. See below.

You don't see me going over to the Arab countries and telling them they have to stop eating goats eyes and such stuff just becauser it makes me sick and nauseous to see that.

And it doesn't even have to be THAT foreign.

You don't see me over in Australia telling them that they all have to stop eatng Vegemite just because it makes us Americans sick and nauseous to see them eating it.

My mom and step--dad threw out Vegemite I ordered because it made her sick from the looks of it. Both her and my step-dad both thought it was food that had went bad and rotted while being mailed to me.

I thought it never arrived until after finding out she threw it out.and

After getting another shipment and telling them it's supposed to look like that, they still threw it out after making them sick and nauseous after tasting it. Saying that it tasted like motor oil, and that I was wrong and they could tell it was rotten from the taste of it. They said it was the worst thing they ever tasted in their entire lives.

After getting another shipmenr, I tasted it, yes on what you're supposed to put it on, and they were correct. It tastes like motor oil.

But do you see meover in Australia telling all the Australians whileI'm there that they're not allowed to eat any of the Vegemite they like just because I don't like it and makes all the Americans I know sick and nauseous to see them eating it?

No. If I went over there or even moved over there, I wouldn't expect them to change their own culture and habits just because one American non-Australian family who recently moved to Australia finds it sickening and disgusting.

What does this have to do with ham antennas. Simple. The American hoa did not have any rules against Americans cooking American food so they fined the family for cooking American food under the "air pollution" rules the hoa had.

So even if your hoa did not have any restrictions against any antennas of any kind at all, you're still not safe since they will simply fine you for breaking the hoa rules against "no air pollution" since it's a "well known fact" by all the "experts" that "the mere presence of an antenna caused RF air pollution whether you're transmitting or not" causing everyone to get radio and tv interference and rf sickness.

I recently read posts by people in charge of hoas, and did NOT like what I seen.

The one asked other hoa presidents "what do you do when a minority of the homeowners want you to follow the law?"

That tells me the people in charge of hoas do not care about following the federal, state, and locall aw theirselves, but will fine anyone who doesn't follow the hoa "laws".

Another one in charge of hoas mentioned "that pesky U.S. Constitution" which tells me the same as above plus telling me that the people in charge of hoas are communists and nazis both of whom want to continously order people what to do in their own private lives in their own private homes and both are traitors to the U.S., U.S. Constitutin, and the standard American way of life that was promoted by America's founding fathers.

And "roller skating" is NOT a threatening activity, despite what hoas say. The kids wre going to their roller skating "classes".

When I was young, almost everyone here in the U.S. normally went roller skating.

After I

That's what bothers me. While I agree that such porn should be illegal and people arrested for it, the U.S. government is not supposed to be able to put people in jail for what was legal at the time it was created, like they are trying to do now by making the law "retro-active".

By making the law retro-active, it is an ex-post facto law which the U.S. Consttution says is illegal for the government to do.

My grandparents used to have a garbage can that had a picture of a naked kid on it painted by Norman Rockwell. I seen it back then. This garbage can was available at most U.S. stores at that time since it was not considered child porn at that time.

Now with that law already claiming that it's retroactive, my grandmother could be arrested for buying that back then, even though it was completely legal back then and not considered porn by most people back then, and no longer has it, IF she was the one who bought it, just because it's considered porn by most people today.

That is very clearly against the U.S. Constitution for the government to do.

Therefore, the law saying they can rettroactively arrest people for it is not a valid law since it violates the U.S. Constitution.

However, the problem with that is there are a number of other laws which also are not valid laws since they violate the U.S. Constitution, and people who have stood up for the U.S. Constitution have been prosecuted for not obeying those unconstitutional laws and lost in court and jailed, with the feds ruling they are allowed to do that.

Even though the U.S. Consttution clearly says those laws are not valid and illegal for the government to do and illegal for the government to jail the people they jailed for not following those unconstitutional laws.

I agree that it is a problematic, but mostly for those who openly deal in this stuff/post it on their web sites, and it passes the Miller test. If a Federal law changes, which I believe that it should, that cartoons which depicts children engaged in sexual acts is illegal, I would support it no matter when the "art"was created.

I agree, but that argument has failed before, with probition as an example. Look at all the alcohol that was destroyed when prohibition went into effect which was produced before prohibition became law, and those that were arrested/jailed for possessing such.

I don't agree with you synopsis because I don't think a Norman Rockwell nude would pass the Miller test, which basically implies that the "art work" would have to be arousing, be offensive when applying community standards, and have no communal value.

i.e.... Miller test for obscenity: "(a) whether the average person, applying contemporary community standards would find that the work, taken as a whole, appeals to the prurient interest; (b) whether the work depicts or describes, in a patently offensive way, sexual conduct specifically defined by the applicable state law; and (c) whether the work, taken as a whole, lacks serious literary, artistic, political, or scientific value."

That is true, the problem with a lot of these unconstitutional laws is they do stand and are enforced until a legal challenge to the U.S. Supreme Court overturns such. However, to the average cop on the street, he does not understand nor care about the complexity or the constitutional validity of a law, only that he can make an arrest. No doubt most of these cases will be thrown out by the courts, but there will be some convictions, depending on the actual evidence obtained from the defendant.

Go to CIty Hall and talk to the Planning and Zoning Department-- sometimes called Community Development. Generally they will help you. If they do not help, go to a City Council meeting and ask them why you can't get a copy of the HOA from the City. Council critters generally respond to citizen's complaints.

Stay away from the Courthouse. They only know how to obfuscate the situation.

That's why I'll never understand the people who use their MURS radios to order food ahead of time from the fast food restaurant.

the food that is suppodsed to be hot is already cold enough by the time you get to the window when you order it at the normal time through the drive through.

Ordering it earlier would make it even colder.

Why go to all this trouble?

In most, if not all, states the seller is required to provide such information.

Jim --

He posted this originally in a ham radio group. I'm a ham operator myself and some HOA/POA CC&R place restrictions on antennas, antenna towers, and the like -- all of which are necessary to a ham radio operator (we consider a 50-foot steel tower with huge antennas and guy wires, 135-foot long wire antennas, and the like to be things of beauty -- neighbors tend to disagree :-)). He probably wants to see the CC&R before he decides whether or not to continue looking in that area, so, he may not have a seller yet.

If his real estate agent does not have his head up his ass, he should be able to get a copy for him -- ask the agent and make him earn his commission.

If all the houses in the area of interest were built at the same time and by the same builder, then they are likely identical, otherwise all bets are off and two houses next to each other may have differenct CC&R.

You go to the seller and ask how much. If you still have interest you ask for the CC&R. Since they are part of the sales contract, the seller HAS to provide them.

This is not rocket science.

I still have my old FCC-approved 40 channel cb I bought brand-new

Yea, all you have to do is act just like you do here in the news group - get an endless loop tape that said "N9OGL is a LID and SPAMMER!; N9OGL is a LID and SPAMMER!; N9OGL is a LID and SPAMMER!" just like all your lawsuit posts here in the group.

The CoTY for 2009 was trying to get in on this thread, but Teranews is now delaying his posts by 12 hours or more! Guess he's once again used up his Tera cred as a non-spammer and is now headed for the bit bucket at the hands of their anti spam scripts. He never learns.

The CoTY for 2009 is suffering from severe post lag. Some posts are almost 48 hours late in appearing, probably because Tera has kicked Marky's spamming butt to the end of the line with its anti-spam scripts.

Your posts are now taking days to appear. Therefore, you cannot participate in any meaningful way, because you are in a time warp.

(It's in the record).

I'm on my own mission since you trashed MY newsgroup. You constantly make new enemies because of your bad behavior, and I'm just one in a long line of enemies. That's why the readers of Nimbusters voted you Cocksucker of the Year for 2009. Most of them never heard of you before you showed up there, but it didn't take long for them to become your enemies too.

This is some kind of troll, right? Ask your realtor. If you don't have one, get one. And remember, there is a huge difference between a realtor who is a professional and a real estate agent. By law in Illinois and most (if not all) other states, CC&R's must be made available prior to purchase. Some associations enforce these to the letter - others' don't. Your realtor should have this info at the time you first view the home. If he/she doesn't - get another realtor.

Scientists have found two large leaks in Earth's magnetosphere, the region around our planet that shields us from severe solar storms.

The leaks are defying many of scientists' previous ideas on how the interaction between Earth's magnetosphere and solar wind occurs: The leaks are in an unexpected location, let in solar particles in faster than expected and the whole interaction works in a manner that is completely the opposite of what scientists had thought.

The findings have implications for how solar storms affect the our planet. Serious storms, which involved charged particles spewing from the sun, can disable satellites and even disrupt power grids on Earth.

The new observations "overturn the way that we understand how the sun's magnetic field interacts with the Earth's magnetic field," said David Sibeck of NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Md., during a press conference today at the annual meeting of the American Geophysical Union in San Francisco.

The bottom line: When the next peak of solar activity comes, in about 4 years, electrical systems on Earth and satellites in space may be more vulnerable.
